Vancouver Island has been quivering with excitement, mounting by the minute, ever since the Queen of Canada and her husband stepped ashore at Nanaimo yesterday.

And for every minute there has been a thrilling highlight—many of which have been caught by Colonist photographers—see pages 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 17, 18, 19.

Goldfine May Go To Prison

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bernard Goldfine, gift-giving friend of politicians, abandoned his defence Thursday against a contempt of Congress indictment. He thereby left himself open to a possible sentence up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Goldfine, 68-year-old Boston industrialist, whose favors to former White House aide Sherman Adams were investigated a year ago by Congress, was indicted for refusing to answer questions about the financial affairs of the Boston Port Development Company.

Margaret's Escort Dances with Queen

The Queen last night danced with John Turner, young Vancouver lawyer who squired Princess Margaret at two balls in Canada last year.

Mr. Turner, stepson of Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross, was one of 100 guests at a private dinner given by Mr. Ross for the Queen.

The Queen wore an evening dress of jade green and turquoise blue flowered taffeta with full gathered back, a three-strand diamond necklace, diamond cluster earrings and a diamond bracelet.

After a dinner of smoked salmon and beef steak, a group of square dancers performed for the Queen. The group was accompanied by a Victoria band, the Hometowners.

The square dancers were followed by a swing band and the Queen had three dances—with Prince Philip, Mr. Turner and Mr. Ross. One of the tunes was Blueberry Hill.

The guests were mostly young people, family members and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ross.

There's No Reason For Inflation Fear

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Scott Gordon of Carleton University says Canadians are afraid of inflation that hardly exists.

He said Wednesday night

there has been exceedingly little inflation in Canada in the post-war period.

He said in the last three months the index has risen only four per cent.

QUEEN'S SPEECH TO 10,000 CLIMAXES ISLAND WELCOME

Heavy Crowds' Greeting Warm and Affectionate

By IAN STREET

Queen Elizabeth made her first speech in British Columbia from the steps of the legislative buildings here yesterday.

It was the highlight of a ceremony welcoming the royal couple to B.C., and the climax of a busy day in which she and Prince Philip visited an Indian village at Nanaimo, visited Chemainus and Duncan and then drove down to Victoria.

Everywhere they went on Vancouver Island, the royal couple was greeted with warmth and affection.

CROWDS ORDERLY

Quiet, orderly crowds lined the routes of the royal procession and looked on with deep interest at the ceremonies where stops were scheduled.

A crowd of almost 10,000 massed in front of the legislative buildings heard the Queen say she was impressed with the developments that have taken place in B.C. since she was here in 1951.

"I am very glad to be here once again this afternoon," she said in reply to an address of welcome given by Premier W. A. C. Bennett, "and thank you most sincerely for your kind welcome."

BEAMING PREMIER

The beaming premier, hatless, wearing a morning suit, said in his brief speech: "We are grateful you have had the opportunity during your visit to B.C. to enjoy a brief rest. "And now that your visit is drawing all too soon to a close we earnestly hope that it will not be long before your loyal subjects may welcome you once again to this province."

"May God protect you always, Your Majesty and Your Royal Highness."

TEN MINUTES LATE

A flutter of excitement passed through the crowd of shirt-sleeved men and women in gay summer dresses as the appointed time for the Queen's arrival came and went.

Finally at 5:20, 10 minutes behind schedule, the first shot of a 21-gun royal salute fired by the 5th Independent Medium Battery, RCA, boomed out across the Inner Harbor.

ANIMATED CHATTER

Brief ceremonies marking the official welcome were held on the steps of the legislative building.

The Queen chatted animatedly with the premier before stepping onto a dais to take the royal salute from an RCN royal guard and color party which had stood motionless for 30 minutes in temperatures topping 80-degrees.

The Queen smiled often as she walked quickly along the ranks of the naval guard accompanied by the guard commander, Lt.-Cmdr. H. E. T. Lawrence. She carried a parasol, but didn't bother to open it.

SHOWS FATIGUE

Mounting the steps to where members of the B.C. cabinet and other ranking officials waited, the Queen seemed suddenly to show the fatigue of a gruelling series of events which started with her arrival in Nanaimo at 10 a.m.

The Queen in her speech recalled the visit here last year of her sister, Princess Margaret.

She said that the visit in the last several days in "this rich and varied province" has shown that "yours is a favored region, amply blessed under the providence of God."

'AS YOUR QUEEN'

"As your Queen I have been impressed by the developments which have taken place since I was here last. I recall the foresight, the courage and the hard work of those who pioneered this vast land and I see that its people still possess the same qualities."

"I am confident, therefore, that this province faces a great and prosperous future, worthy of those who built it, and I pray that this may be so."

Typhoid Details Wanted

OTTAWA (CP)—The army and air force have sent urgent messages overseas asking for full details of a suspected outbreak of typhoid fever among 200 children of Canadian servicemen at a camp near Ijmuiden, Holland.

Army and RCAF officials said the children are likely Boy Scouts. However, there was no indication whether they are the sons of army or air force personnel.

There are about 1,500 Canadian Boy Scouts in Europe, all sons of Canadian servicemen. Each summer groups camp in various parts of Europe.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

ABOARD C.N.R. 'CONTINENTAL' EAST-BOUND—The prairies were a fresh, bright green as we passed through.

"There used to be thousands of buffaloes here," I told the boys. "And now, this is where our wheat comes from, for our bread."

The boys turned over this nugget of information for three or four seconds in their minds, and then dropped it.

"I want to see a gopher," John announced.

"There's a tractor," said Michael. The tractor was pulling a plow, turning up the rich brown earth. And then there were green woods and horses, and cows, and grain elevators, and small towns with mud streets that had hardened, but had not yet turned to dust. It was a pleasant time of the year.

Long afterwards, Michael piped up: "This is where our bread comes from, isn't it?" He had remembered, after all.

I had two beers in the dinette car with a large, cheerful man who was travelling from Jasper to Edmonton, taking his small daughter to visit her grandmother.

He thought Edmonton was the finest town in the world. "It'll be a city of 1,000,000 before too long," he said, exulting over the growth of his old home town. "Chunks of land out in the country, that you couldn't give away, are in town now, and they've sold for a couple of hundred thousand."

I agreed with him that there was something to quicken the blood about a big, dynamic town where wheels were turning and plain men were transforming themselves into millionaires.

"Drop in, if you're ever in Victoria," I said. "I'll never go there while I'm alive," he said with a grin.

It was raining hard in Edmonton that day. "It's pouring" down, all the way from Vancouver," I heard a Scot say. (Only he used a stronger word than "pouring.")

The small boys were bitterly disappointed that they couldn't see the town. They wanted to roam about, rain or no rain. But our raincoats were packed deep down in some suitcases that had gone in the baggage car.

The boys demanded that I carry them, one on each shoulder, to the station door. I went just outside, but refused to go further. So Edmonton in their minds will be a broad dark street with bright rectangular lights shining down upon it, into the distance, and the rain falling.

When I let them down from my shoulders, they began to race and scream around the station, playing a furious cowboy game which called for them to go through the motions of chasing and shooting one another and dropping dead by turns.

The travellers in the station were going about their business without taking the smallest notice of my boys, but I fancied that several hundred pairs of critical eyes and ears were tuned in to them.

It was time to get back aboard the train, anyway. I scolded the boys and hurried them aboard to their bed.

Northland Navigation

One Strike Settled

VANCOUVER (CP)—A strike at the Northland Navigation Company which involved four unions and the 200,000-member British Columbia Federation of Labor was settled Thursday.

The dispute, which started three weeks ago, tied up coast shipping for some time. The federal government took emergency measures to ensure northern communities received adequate supplies.

G. R. Currie, a federal department of labor industrial relations officer who has been supervising talks here, announced Thursday that all work will be resumed immediately.

Terms of the settlement were not announced.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Five thousand salmon net fishermen will strike if a settlement on prices is not reached by noon July 25, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union announced Thursday.

The union said net-caught salmon taken after that date will be declared "hot."

VANCOUVER (CP)—Negotiations for a settlement of a three-week-old ironworkers' strike broke down again Thursday when the union's representative walked out of a meeting with employers.

Norm Edisson, business agent of Local 97 of the International Association of Bridge Structural and Ornamental Steelworkers, walked out after demanding that the Dominion Bridge Company not be represented on the employers' negotiating committee.

Mr. Edisson gave no reason for his action but warned that any further negotiations would have to be handled by mail if this were not done.

City Driver Exonerated In Policeman's Death

A coroner's jury, after listening to four eyewitnesses and the driver involved, yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death, with no blame attached, in the death Monday of city police officer, Const. Earle Michael Doyle.

Const. Doyle suffered fatal head injuries Sunday when his motorcycle and a car collided on Douglas.

The inquest, under deputy coroner Dr. J. H. Moore, was told that the constable was riding away from town in the lane of traffic nearer the curb; and that the car, driven by Edward G. Whitehouse, 4025 Saanich, driving to town on Douglas, was turning left into a service station.

Three witnesses, a brother and a sister and their cousin, were in the same southbound car when they saw the crash. They were Allan and Ruth Graham, and Ruth Lennox, all of 1015 Tolmie. None of them saw the actual impact, but all saw the officer's body going high in the air over the car.

Terence Lytle, 615 Ralph, did not see the crash, but heard the impact.

Mr. Whitehouse told the jury he did not see the officer until a split second before the impact, and then only as a blur. None of the witnesses could say just when the officer's crash helmet came off, but agreed it was not on his head when he struck the road.

Heiress Freed as Boy Friend Jailed

'Penniless Adventurer' Defied Orders of Court

LONDON (AP) — A jobless ex-truckdriver who wooed an under-age British heiress in defiance of a judge's order was sent to prison yesterday for contempt of court.

Edward Langley, 27, was denounced by Justice Harry Vaisey as a "penniless adventurer." Justice Vaisey said if Langley thought he was going to be freed in a week or so "he had better think again."

BOTH IN JAIL

Also behind bars until she was freed yesterday was the other party to the ill-starred romance, 20-year-old Katharine Dowsett, pretty daughter of a millionaire Lincolnshire shipbuilder. She was sent to Holloway prison last Friday for violating a court order obtained by her father forbidding her to have any contact with her suitor.

Under British court rules Langley may be detained indefinitely until the judge is satisfied he has learned that court orders must be obeyed.

AGREED TO TALK

Dowsett trailed Katharine and Langley to Scotland and persuaded her to come home to talk things over. She still said she was determined to marry Langley. Dowsett then had her made a ward of the high court, which ordered her to stay away from Langley and Langley to stay away from her. Their answer to that was a second elopement to Scotland.

This time they were brought back by a court bailiff and Miss Dowsett was popped into prison.

How Many 'Dog-Robbers' Wasted as Army Servants?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress focused attention yesterday on complaints that officers are turning soldiers into "dog-robbers."

In military slang, a "dog-robber" is an officer's servant. The term originates from the soldier's feeling that the assignment may carry a social status one rung lower than that of the officer's dog.

A House armed services subcommittee which has been exploring the use of military manpower is now digging into the assignment of enlisted men as servants.

Rep. Frank Kowalski (D, Conn.), a retired army colonel, is Congress' most severe critic of waste of manpower by the armed forces.

Kowalski predicted that the defence department would say the number of enlisted men assigned as servants has been exaggerated.

He said any Pentagon statistics would probably be "like an iceberg."

Kowalski told the subcommittee it might be possible to save as much as $250,000,000 a year if manpower wasn't squandered on tasks such as walking dogs and baby-sitting.

He cited a report that at least 20,000 enlisted men are assigned as stewards, orderlies, messboys, chauffeurs and the like, and argued that young men shouldn't be drafted for that kind of work.

Anti-Sub Admiral Paints Grim Picture

By JACK BRAYLEY

HALIFAX (CP)—The admiral's weather-tanned face looked grim when he pointed to overlapping red lines down the centre of a map of North America.

He was emphasizing his conception of the West's greatest weakness in a future war. The lines were the effective range of guided missiles that could be launched from enemy submarines sneaking close to our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

"And at this moment there isn't much we could do to stop 'em," he declared.

One of his audience of four top Canadian business executives commented wryly: "You're scaring me to death." "Well, I can tell you," said the admiral, "my staff and I certainly have sleepless nights wondering how soon we're all going to wake up to this greatest of all threats to our security."

The chalk talk, in a briefing room of the big United States carrier Wasp, was given by Rear Admiral Robert Stroh, 51, chief of anti-submarine task force Bravo and for nearly 50 years a naval aviator.

Gathered around the charts and graphs were the four Canadian guests—Harold Husband of Victoria, president of the Canadian Shipbuilding Association and president of Victoria Machinery Depot; George Wilcox of Hamilton, president of the Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.; Chip Drury of Montreal, president and managing director of the Canadian General Transit Co. Ltd., and Canadian Car and Foundry Co. Ltd., and Gordon McGregor, also Montreal, president of TCA.

Dying Bee Gave Its All To Hurt Hazel

PARSONS, Kan. (AP)—Hazel May is quite skillful with scissors.

She works in a garment factory, and when a bee invaded the place she snapped her shears at the rascal, snipping it neatly in two.

But things did not come out so well in the end. The half of the bee capable of stinging fell in the scissors-snapper's chair. She sat down on it, and was stung.

A Day of Days

HAVING been received with spontaneous acclaim and made welcome in the name of the province, entered Government House as its first and most important guests, the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh face a very busy program today. It is a schedule that would daunt a less dedicated and vivacious Queen. For eight hours on end Her Majesty will be the cynosure of all eyes as she proceeds in rapid succession from one function to another. Actually the program pace is excessive, although royal tour arrangers never seem able to appreciate this.

For Victorians however this is a gala day, and the Queen's reward will be the enthusiasm and goodwill that greet her at every appearance. If the sun shines as predicted that will cap an event long to linger in memory. "We want the Queen" is by now a notable chant, throughout the Commonwealth as outside Buckingham Palace, and the rush for vantage points today will reflect the same keen desire to see the royal lady who is without her peer in the world today.

Strenuous the program may be, but it is one that gives Victorians grand opportunity. The processions through town, the visits to the veterans' hospital, the youth rally at Clover Point, the civic welcome at Beacon Hill, the garden party at Government House, the PPCLI ceremony—all these provide amply to permit everyone to pay his or her personal tribute to Her Majesty and her celebrated consort Prince Philip. With the closing spectacle of the naval illuminations this should be a day of days.

It is one that may be shared in interest from start to finish by both the Queen and her Victoria subjects. This city is fortunate in having the royal party here for two days on end, a privilege denied many other communities. It is patent that intentions are to make the most of the occasion. The strain on the Queen will be severe, but she will become more deeply entrenched in public affection because of her ready response to the demands made upon her. She warrants well all the acclaim that is hers.

Stopgap Ferry Plan

AS an alternative to the Victoria-Vancouver ferry service, which the CPR intends to discontinue towards the end of September, Oak Bay council has produced a suggestion which is worth earnest consideration. It is that the provincial government should ask the CPR or the Black Ball organization to run a ferry to the mainland from Sidney during the winter months and until the now-building provincial ferries are ready to begin operating.

This is an eminently practicable proposal which should commend itself even to the CPR. The company has declined to provide Victoria with direct connection to the mainland after the summer ends because operations last winter incurred substantial financial losses; and it is an unrefuted policy of the CPR that any branch of its vast operations which fails to show a profit has to go. A route from Sidney would be shorter by almost two hours in time and would also eliminate some of the causes of delay to navigation in months subject to storm. One of the CPR's smaller ships could supply adequate winter service, and the company might well find that instead of having a losing operation on its hands it had a money-maker.

It is not good enough to say that Victoria would be served satisfactorily by the Nanaimo-Vancouver ferries because there are times in winter when snow and ice conditions on the Malahat make private car travel hazardous or impossible. Nor are air connections unfailingly reliable at that time of year. Up to now inability to travel via Nanaimo or by air has not been too serious a matter because there was always the Victoria-Vancouver boat to fall back on—which may not have been fair to the CPR but was important to the business of the capital city.

To leave Victoria in the lurch next winter would be the worst kind of public relations for an organization owing its existence to popular favor. The goodwill of the public could be restored by a show of willingness to maintain stop-gap service. Of course readiness of the new wharf now under construction at Sidney might be a governing factor, but if the CPR agreed to co-operate it should not be too hard to persuade the federal government to expedite work on the terminal.

Subsidized Freight Rates

WHILE British Columbia shippers may be grateful for the seven per cent reduction on non-competitive freight rates to apply on national lines in the province on August 1 by order of the transport board, it is early yet to assess the "saving." Superficially the cut, which comes off the nationally subsidized freight charges, could amount to a reduction of some $3,000,000 affecting rail users of the province. As both national railways have been granted freight rate increases, which made subsidization necessary, however, precisely the same sum will have to be made up by federal taxpayers elsewhere, B.C. shippers included.

The truth of the matter is that the present administration at Ottawa reversed itself on the issue of higher freight charges. It began by suspending freight rate hikes ordered at that time by the transport board. Under pressure from the carriers Ottawa later yielded to the increase in freight charges, and then came under fire from the shippers throughout the country. The rate subsidy plan followed as a temporary expedient—which is what it remains—while a federal commission gets to work afresh on the whole issue of rail service and costs in Canada. Presumably it will take a year or so for the new commission to examine the complex and much-patched problem. Meanwhile partial subsidies, which all taxpayers pay, are being resorted to, as in this instance.

Nevertheless we agree with the attorney-general that some relief against ever-rising rail charges is better than none. What we do not know, and doubt if anyone else can yet, is what proportion of these lessened charges is being shifted by this means from one pocket to another—from the rail shipper as such, to the same individual as a federal taxpayer. Time, no doubt, will tell.

Interpreting the News

Sukarno in Trouble

By PHIL NEWSON
UPI Foreign Editor

THE question arises, in a nation unstable both politically and economically, just how stable is the government of Indonesia's President Sukarno?

Sukarno, a successful revolutionary but so far a failure as an administrator, recently was forced into a decision he disliked.

He returned from a nine-and-a-half-week round-the-world goodwill tour to find his parliament in revolt against his "guided democracy" plan, and national inflation in such a state that first families quietly were selling jewels, furniture, clothing for something to eat.

Sukarno promised quick, decisive action. His action was to dissolve parliament and, by decree, to abolish the nation's provisional constitution. He thereby assumed to himself virtual dictatorial powers.

For Sukarno, it was an unpleasant decision on two counts. First, he is by nature a compromiser and the easier course would have been once more to seek a compromise among Indonesia's warring political parties and by other compromises to look for a way out of the labyrinth of other difficulties ranging from inflation to revolt.

Second, it appeared the decision was not Sukarno's own, but the army's.

It has been Sukarno's habit to turn his back on the problems of his young republic.

A year and a half ago, he was in Japan when the "young colonels" threatened revolt. Sukarno blandly ignored the threat and the revolt began. This year, with the Moslems in revolt against his "guided democracy" plan, he departed on tour again.

The result was total defeat for what he had hoped to accomplish by parliamentary means and the need finally to accomplish it by decree.

For the first time in the history of independent Indonesia, Sukarno himself was on the spot, without the shield of a premier who might be blamed for national ills.

His first aim was to abolish opposition from political parties. The government he planned would consist of a cabinet not based on parties, a national planning council and an advisory council composed of experts appointed by Sukarno, and finally a peoples' congress wherein presidential appointees also would hold the balance of power.

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IDEAS have legs but I never thought that all ideas were eligible to run together in a three-legged race. The connection between Klaus Fuchs and Martin Luther and the Founding Fathers of the United States passes me by even if such is the projection of Malcolm Muggeridge, writing in the Toronto Star.

Mr. Muggeridge makes an assessment of Fuchs that does credit, possibly, to his own magnanimity. He depicts him as possessed of an idea—a mistaken and "perhaps" a bad idea—but nevertheless an idea, as though this were absolutism enough for what he terms a "disinterested act."

Fuchs' motive he regards as a mystery but one doubts that excuses a betrayal. If motive were always the primary judging point, and not the offence itself, half the wrongdoers of the world might find easy escape.

Many of us at least will find it difficult to accept the notion that Fuchs was disinterested; and with some warrant surely. If a man betrays your secrets to a potential enemy the assumption is that he does not do this on whim or for abstract reason even if he happens to be a scientist. Fuchs may be a person of conflicting minds, and have a scale of values outside the norm of human society, but for the commonality of us it is too abstruse a proposition that this reduces the gravity of his misdeeds.

Mr. Muggeridge asks of Fuchs: "A traitor to what? To whom?" The answer seems fairly simple. He betrayed the people who succored him and gave him the opportunity to pursue his undoubted scientific gifts, by surreptitiously passing to Russia atomic secrets which were vital to the security of those he served. That is not to be lightly blinked aside by academic discussion. Set alongside this treason, the thesis advanced by Mr. Muggeridge—that Fuchs will have a place in history as one who, however misguided, sought the good of his fellows—seems too thin for comfortable acceptance.

Martin Luther also had an idea, and it is here that yours truly loses track of Mr. Muggeridge. He says that the Reformer, in the context of his age and circumstances, did the same as Fuchs. In what way? Luther protested against existing practices of his church, as any man may do in any age, in the open and to try and reform its doctrines. He did not secretly betray the papal authority to a foreign agency.

Equally fantastic to this writer is the argument that in repudiating their allegiance to the British crown the Fathers of the U.S.A. were in like case to Fuchs. They had an idea they thought a just one—some Britons thought so too—and they manfully and openly espoused it. They might be linked to Fuchs had the latter rejected his "loyalty" by openly refusing in the name of all humanity to further the promotion of atomic weapons. He might then have won a respected place in history. But he did not; he deceived his benefactors and betrayed them to another power.

Mr. Muggeridge ends his philosophical essay on Fuchs by referring to the New Testament and quoting: "Judge not that ye be not judged." He does not judge Fuchs, he says, he wishes him well. This is probably a more forgiving attitude than most of us feel able to assume. And for our consolation there is something in the New Testament, also, about a certain traitor and the judgment that befell him.

Labor's Outmoded Bludgeon

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

OVER here it is the printers. With British Columbia it is the woodworkers. Either way the good old-fashioned bludgeon of the strike seems rather a pathetic commentary upon democracy.

It does not seem to console anyone that they cannot get away with a strike in Russia, where state and socialism are gods; although there has been a growing recognition amongst the more enlightened people in the labor movement over here that the strike is obsolete and outmoded.

The main argument is purely economic. No one does any good out of a strike, but some of the bosses can stand it better.

Some printers I know are getting worried. It started when they had to cancel a summer holiday in Europe—but that at least was pure pleasure, and something to be sacrificed in a cause. After three weeks it is a question of putting down on the house-keeping, and they are discovering that nothing eats into savings more quickly than nothing coming in. The time-payment man will not wait, and the welfare state refuses to pay unemployment pay to those who refuse to work.

All that is coming in is strike pay, which in turn is causing a mighty leak in the savings of the unions concerned. But those who believe in the big stick of the strike are not deterred. Some left wingers are trying to extend the dispute by such means as refusing to handle paper, ink and distribution of newspapers being produced under difficulty. Mr. Frank Cousins, the boss of the Transport and General

Workers' Union, who made a big mess of the London bus strike last year has promised "all help" to the printers. He has also come out against official labor policy on the H-bomb, and wholeheartedly supports a socialist program of nationalization.

The Transport and General Workers (equivalent to the Teamsters) is one of the biggest and most powerful unions in the country. It sticks rigidly to outmoded theories but retains with them some of the crusading zeal of the old Labor Party. It just does not care a cuss for the electorate or what anyone thinks.

Mr. Herbert Morrison and Mr. Emmanuel Shinwell, two former socialist ministers, have applauded Mr. Cousins' stand favoring more nationalization. The public, who were reasonably neutral in 1945 and were prepared to see how it worked, are no longer neutral. British Railways since nationalization is accumulating losses at the rate of $270,000,000 a year. Our two nationalized airlines are running in the red at the rate of a modest $18,000,000. Gas and electricity, because there is no opposition, are in the red. Trading on the fact that few are willing to go without light and power, they have merely doubled their prices, and cut off supplies to those who do not pay.

The post office manages to pay its way on the same basis. Telephone charges have been trebled and postage has been virtually doubled and the service has gone to pot. We have reached the point where, at holiday times, the long suffering British public is without a mail delivery for 72 hours.

Bluntly the British public is not impressed with nationalization. They recognize it for what it is—a leaderless industry subject to political whims with no economic restraints. A ## Waste of Experience...

Premature RCAF Retirements

(From The Montreal Gazette)

AS times change, policies must change with them. Senator C.G. ("Chubby") Power told the Senate the other day of an experience of his which illustrates this most vividly.

He was telling a friend, he said, how impractical is the Royal Canadian Air Force retirement system which forces many men to leave the service when they are still capable of many years of public service. "I wanted to know," said Mr. Power, "who the blessed idiot was who brought this policy in." The records prove that it was Mr. Power himself, then defence minister, who introduced the present policy during the Second World War.

Under that policy, depending on rank, Air Force officers are retired at various ages after 45. There are instances, Mr. Power told the Upper House, "of men under 50, of men between the ages of 45 and 50, being retired with pensions approximating $6,000 to $7,000 a year, at a time when these men have an opportunity of a very fruitful career before them."

The policy was instituted as an encouragement to make the service a lifetime career; under it there is a gradual but continuous change of personnel in the top ranks, making it certain that there is always room for advancement for men of value.

The policy has served its purpose. Today, when there is a growing number of administrative posts which do not require the youth demanded of combat duty, the force is losing many men of proved experience and talent. The Air Force needs such men. The retirement policy requires adjustment to insure that the force does not automatically lose them at an age when they are, perhaps, most valuable.

And it needs adjustment to spare the taxpayers from paying for pensions for men still in the prime of life, most of whom will develop other "fruitful" careers.

To Stifle Competition

(From The Winnipeg Free Press)

A PROVINCIAL statute to licence retail merchants has been suggested by the executive of the Manitoba Retail Merchants' Association. If the association's submission were accepted, no one would be allowed to enter the retail business unless his enterprise was approved by a provincial licensing board upon which—of all things—established retailers would have a voice.

The purpose of this restriction is plain. It is to reduce competition by eliminating anyone who does not fit into the association's conception of how business should be conducted. It is foolish to pretend—as the retail merchants do—that this would also protect consumers. The consumer cannot possibly benefit from a system that reduces competition, or restricts the establishment of new enterprises.

It is difficult to believe that the retail merchants are actually serious about their suggestion. But, if they are, one can only trust that the provincial government, which is being asked to set up the licensing act, is not so credulous.

Back door nationalization is the process of acquiring by purchase shares in existing private enterprise on behalf of the government, which the political enthusiasts have advanced as a compromise solution to the cleavage in the industrial movement. Mr. Cousins is, of course, giving his political leader Mr. Gaitskell a major headache. With an election probable in October the last thing the socialists want is an open split.

They are getting it—and a wide one. Mr. Cousins is also anxious for Britain to ban the H-bomb. The official Labor Party agree that at the moment it is unfortunate but necessary.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

IT is probable that there are still thousands or tens of thousands of old-fashioned lawnmowers still in use. Not everybody can afford the new power lawnmowers. Not everybody who can afford them is prepared to jettison a perfectly good old-fashioned lawnmower. In fact, it may be that the majority who can afford power mowers are able to afford them because they have not been in the habit of throwing things away.

But it is some time now since I have heard the sweet ringing tone of an old-fashioned lawnmower. To a man sitting in the shade on his veranda, or better still, lying on a couch up in a cool room for forty winks in the pleasant afternoon, the sound of a lawnmower was a curiously appealing sort of music. It imparted a soft sense of peace and contentment in the hearer. There was a rise and fall in it, a cadence, as the householder shoving the lawnmower made short runs and long runs. Lying there in the cool, a listener could visualize the neighbor, the lawnmower clutched to his belly, bending with purpose as he made the long, sweet runs the length of the lawn, and the short runs across the width of the lawn. Then, there were brief passages of song as the neighbor took short swipes at bits he had overlooked, or around the edges.

Today, the deep hum or snore of the power mower conveys no picture at all. It is just another of the mechanical sounds of human society in the second semester of the 20th century.

Hearing the sound of a power mower, a man lying snoring in the cool room for forty winks is merely reminded that this is the 20th century and he'd better get up and go to work so as to be able to buy a power mower, too.

Fair Deal for All

I note that Labor Minister Wicks has stated that he would not consider the establishment of labor courts democratic unless desired by labor and management. Does the government represent only labor and management, the minority? What about the poor consumer who will have to pay whatever extra costs labor and management agree upon? Surely if we are going to be democratic, let us consider the consumer, who constitutes the great majority.

Let us have a few polls and see if the consumer, i.e., the majority, is satisfied with the present useless system of conciliation, or whether we should have labor courts which can, on the basis of accurate data, determine a fair deal for labor, management and the consumer.

M. P. PAINE.

3620 Quadra Street.

National Emergency

Mr. Wicks' statement that management and labor would have to agree on labor courts before he would do anything about the critical situation we are in; he has tongue in cheek surely?

What about the general public who elected him? Should not they be consulted? They do the paying. The majority of electors would favor our courts taking hold of a situation where our labor relations are out of hand, there being no order, equity or justice in evidence insofar as the general public is concerned.

The people who have to do all the paying are not being considered and no one in authority or in a position to do it does anything or will even help to obtain a cross section of public opinion, which, if obtained would show disgust with present labor, management, and government conduct, both federal and provincial; and the time is late. We now have a real national emergency with us.

Crash Helmets

With reference to the most unfortunate accident to the police officer, I would like to suggest that chin-straps with holes punched in and buckles may prove to minimize future cases of helmets flying off in the event of collision. A press stud is most unsatisfactory.

I rode a motorcycle in the Royal Air Force in England and had the stud on a similar type of helmet come undone even at the turn of head. This was private motor-cycling—nothing to do with air force issue. The RAF had hole and buckle type.

Coercion Stops Firms From Signing with IWA

Coercion is being used to prevent member firms of Forest Industrial Relations from signing individual agreements with the striking IWA. Jack MacKenzie, president of Victoria Local 1-118, IWA, charged this week.

"There is no crack in the armor of the IWA, but there is a crack in the armor of Forest Industrial Relations," he said at this week's meeting of Victoria Labor Council.

"There are people in there who want to sign up with the union but they are being coerced."

Forest Industrial Relations is formed of 127 Coast Lumber operators affected by the IWA walkout.

Mr. MacKenzie said four Victoria firms have signed agreements with the IWA and a further 24 have signed in Local 71, on the mainland.

Scout Scorns Shorts

COBALT, Ont. (CP)—Since the days of the late Lord Baden-Powell few Scouts worth their badges have failed to parade dressed in shorts, but the tradition doesn't impress at least one Canadian.

Queen's Scout Robert Kelkila, 20, said in an interview that regulations instituted by the movement's founder, Lord Baden-Powell, in South Africa during the Boer War are in need of a change.

"Scout laws created in the horse and buggy days don't always fit into today's rocket age," he said.

The requisite of short pants on parade cuts no ice with Canadian boys and their Scout leaders as a whole, and could even be a factor preventing more young people from being associated with the movement, he claimed.

"Shorts are out of style and unsuitable for Canada's cold climate or summer bushland," said Robert. "In Canada, where youngsters wear long pants sometimes before they are weaned, it is an unpopular step to force them into shorts in the Scout movement."

'Instrument To Destroy Trade Unions'

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP)—Joe Morris, head of the British Columbia district of the International Woodworkers of America, said Wednesday B.C.'s Labor Relations Act is "an instrument for the destruction of the trade union movement."

"Many of our people," he said in a speech here, "have made up their minds they will give up their personal freedom before they will submit to the law."

Morris said 38,000 workers were on strike in British Columbia and 15,000 more probably would follow within the next 10 days "all because of this law which the premier said would prevent more labor unrest."

We Can Crush Germany Again—Nikita

KATOWICE, Poland (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev warned West Germany last night that Russia could "repeat" the lesson it taught Nazi Germany.

The Soviet chief delivered the stern warning only a few hours after he had pledged in a speech that the Soviet Union "never, never, never" would launch "any war against anybody else."

Khrushchev told a cheering market place crowd here that West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer "has forgotten the lesson given to Hitler. But it can be repeated again."

"There is a reactionary voice in West Germany," the visiting Khrushchev declared in his second major speech of the day. "Hitler started it. But we gave him a lesson."

The Soviet premier warned that if Adenauer should attack any Communist nation, "he will be beaten in his own country."

Khrushchev's 10-minute speech attacking Adenauer and West Germany climaxed the third day of the Soviet leader's tour of Poland. It followed a 30-minute address by Polish Communist party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka. "A new world war would bring destruction to all human-kind, and this should be borne in mind by all people and all nations," Khrushchev said.

Duncan Captivated By Royal Queries

By CHARLES THOMPSON

DUNCAN—Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip were at their inquiring best yesterday when they captivated a crowd of nearly 4,000 in 90-degree heat. Shortly after they arrived here and were being presented to local dignitaries, Prince Philip interrupted Coun. D. C. Morton, representing North Cowichan council, and asked, "What do you do when you are not being a reeve?"

"I'm a dairyman," the councillor replied, after saying he was not the reeve.

BLACK AND WHITE
"Oh, you keep those black and white things."
"No. I have Ayrshires, red and white."
"We have some of those, too," replied the prince.

The couple were presented to Mayor and Mrs. Jack Dobson, Councillor and Mrs. Morton, Lake Cowichan Village Commissioner and Mrs. M. F. Wise, Ladysmith Village Commissioner and Mrs. Len Ryan, Cowichan Indian Chief and Mrs. Elwood Modeste, and B.C.'s former agent-general in London, W. A. McAdam and his wife.

Then the royal couple were asked to sign the visitors' book for North Cowichan and Duncan.

Mayor Dobson opened a page to the entry of July 16, 1958, where the Queen's sister, Princess Margaret, signed the book.

"Have you seen many of these?" asked the mayor, laughing.

"Everywhere we go," said the Queen, laughing with him. Then they were presented with a bouquet of flowers by Lorraine Holman, Cowichan's flower queen.

"How old are you?" asked Philip.

"Twelve," she answered, nonplussed.

"What do you want to be when you grow up?"

"A school teacher," Lorraine answered as she backed down the stairs from the dias in Pioneer Park.

Mounties Get Their Man And Give Close Shaves

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The RCMP has been called on to do many things in its history but an emergency call Wednesday morning probably will go down as one of the strangest.

A constable rushed out of the royal train parked on a siding before it took the Queen and Prince Philip into New Westminster.

He was given a broken electric shaver and told to have it repaired and get it back before the Queen left the train at 10 a.m.

The constable rushed to Vancouver, had the repairs done and got it back to the train in time. It is not known who owned the shaver.

Truck Decks Vistas

DUNCAN — Observation facilities were unusual when Queen Elizabeth visited Duncan's Pioneer Park yesterday. But they had a Duncan touch to them.

Behind the enclosure where most spectators sat or stood, hundreds stood on the flat decks of six lumber trucks and three trailers arranged in a long line.

Behind the hundreds standing on truck and trailer decks, 25 more sat still higher in the air—on platforms raised by two mobile lumber loaders.

Before the Queen arrived, the shade under the trucks and trailers, the only shade in blazing acres apart from the presentation dais, enticed some to sit or lie there.

One man not only sat under a trailer himself, but watched over a baby in a buggy and a toddler on a tricycle there.

Gulf Islands Invasion Swells Chemainus Crowd for Big Day

CHEMAINUS—More people than there are residents in this busy mill community caught a brief glimpse of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip here yesterday.

"They must have emptied the Gulf Islands," commented Harry Ewart, a member of the committee who planned the tour here.

An estimated 3,000 to 4,000 saw the royal couple from the time they started their slow drive into the downtown area to when they left the Fullers Lake area for Duncan.

Population of Chemainus is "barely" 3,000.

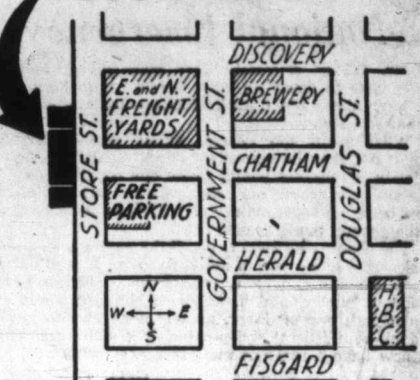

The procession arrived here 20 minutes late and went through town at about 15 miles an hour.

"If that's slow I'd like to see what their fast is," commented a bystander.

Crowds stood 10 deep near the municipal sub-office on Willow Street where elderly citizens sat in a special roped-off area, beside more than 100 Cubs and Scouts, 50 Legion veterans and the 20-member Queen and Prince continued on to the southern end of town for the luncheon on the fourth stop at the Cenotaph-faded fairway of Mount Brenton golf course.

Crowds at Duncan Have Lots to Say

By TED SHACKLEFORD

DUNCAN—"Zero hour is approaching," someone cried in a loud voice at Duncan's Pioneer Park at 2 p.m. yesterday and someone else, on the official platform warned: "Now, you all know the drill!"

And as Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip hove into view, two smartly dressed women near the dais began talking...

"Aw, there she, bless her heart," one said. "There he is. Isn't he handsome!"

"Pearkes is with them," the other said. "Which one is he, the big fat one?"

"No, the one without a hat... aw, isn't she sweet?"

"He's saying a few words... oh, isn't she lovely in black and white? Who's that man?"

"That's Wise from Cowichan Lake. (M. F. Wise, chairman of Cowichan Lake village commission) Oh, isn't she lovely!"

"That's one of those satin dresses. (Pure silk surrah) Hasn't she got a small waist!"

"He's talking to them all. Is that Modeste? (Elwood Modeste, chief of the Cowichan Indian tribe).

"Yes."

"My, he's nice looking."

"Of course, they met them in Nanaimo, the Modestes."

"This is going to take more than three minutes."

"Yes, but that is what endears them to us. She's sweet, isn't she?"

"Oh, there's Mr. McAdam. (W. A. McAdam, former B.C. agent-general in London.) I'm so glad it's nice and cool for them."

"She doesn't use the same makeup that Margaret uses."

"No, not nearly."

"There... hasn't he got nice blue eyes."

"That's kind of a queer hat, isn't it, she's wearing... Kind of a mandarin effect."

"Fresh as a daisy, isn't she. She's talking to them all. Oh, isn't that nice."

"Now this is where the little girl comes up."

"Where is she?"

"Just behind Jack there. Ah, she said a few words to the little girl."

"Oh, she's speaking to them... Oh, isn't that sweet."

"She curtsied again... down she goes. She'll just be in her seventh heaven."

And at that point other people began talking nearby, drowning out the conversation.

Gentle Hand Helps Pioneer

Gentle hand of Prince Philip helps Nanaimo pioneer, 97-year-old Mrs. Polly Johnston, from presentation dais at Exhibition Park after Mrs. Johnston was presented to royal visitors.

Thousands Cheer After Slow Start

NANAIMO — Nanaimo's greeting to Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip got off to a slow start yesterday morning when the royal couple disembarked from HMCS Assiniboine, which carried them to Vancouver Island from Vancouver.

A disappointingly small crowd was at the dock to greet them, very few flags or decorations were in evidence, and there was little cheering from the few who were present.

MADE UP FOR IT

But Nanaimo residents made up for the poor showing at the dock once the royal cavalcade moved out of the dock area.

The crowd was much thicker as the cars moved through the town toward Exhibition Park, and at the packed park the Queen and Prince Philip were given a standing ovation by thousands of children and adults.

Long before the Assiniboine came in sight from the dock, four Neptune anti-submarine aircraft from 407 Maritime Squadron, RCAF, Comox, patrolled the route ahead of the destroyer escort.

Prince Philip stood in plain view on an observation bridge on the port side of the ship as it entered the harbor. The Queen was not in sight.

After the ship was tied up securely the crew assembled on the rear deck for some 15 minutes until the royal couple disembarked.

Defence Minister George Pearkes welcomed Queen Elizabeth as she stepped off the gangplank. He bowed low over her hand and murmured: "Welcome to Vancouver Island, Your Majesty."

Mr. Pearkes introduced his wife, and then Mayor Pete Maffeo of Nanaimo, dressed in blue robes trimmed in ermine and wearing his gold chain of office.

Bacon, Eggs, Fish Start Royal Day

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip started their round of tour activities on Vancouver Island yesterday after a breakfast of bacon and eggs and fish.

The royal couple ate alone in the captain's cabin aboard HMCS Assiniboine as the ship neared Nanaimo after a 12-hour overnight cruise in Georgia Strait.

"Both Her Majesty and Prince Philip said they had a restful night," Assiniboine's commanding officer, Capt. J. C. Pratt, said yesterday in Victoria.

The Prince was first up, he said. He spent some time on the bridge talking to the officer of the day. Obviously impressed with Canada's newest class of ships, he displayed a lively curiosity about them.

The Queen, in true womanly fashion, later remarked on the cleanliness of the ship. "It is obvious," she said, "that many men have been on their knees."

In a cablegram to Admiral H. S. Rayner, Flag Officer Pacific Coast, the Queen said: "I was very much impressed by the smartness of this ship and of the escorting squadron."

"Please send warm congratulations and good wishes from my husband and myself to all ranks on the Pacific Coast."

Indian art of carving wood with primitive tools is demonstrated to interested Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip by David Hunt in "Indian village" in Exhibition Park near Nanaimo.

Baskets woven by Indian women interest Queen, who bends to see detail and talk to weavers. Queen and Prince Philip appeared to enjoy tour of village, bright with morning sunshine, breeze-blown and full of sound of Indian drums and singing.

Maffeo of Nanaimo, who presented up-Island municipal and Indian leaders. Queen and Prince Philip stopped to speak to some of children.

By R. O. MARRION

NANAIMO — With the smell of smoking salmon and the sound of throbbing drums in the air, Queen Elizabeth yesterday was honored with an additional name by the Indians of British Columbia.

The name Ar-oh-muthl was given to her in a brief ceremony as she and Prince Philip started a tour of an Indian village in Nanaimo's Exhibition Park.

It means "respected by all, mother of all people," and is a Kwakiutl name, according to Chief Counsellor James Sewid of the Alert Bay band, who conferred it.

MOSTLY CHILDREN

A crowd of more than 3,000, mostly children, from Nanaimo and places farther up the Island, welcomed the Queen and Prince Philip with a roar when their car entered the park.

In the infield, more than 200 Vancouver Island Indians who had been practising their dances, tending-smoked and barbecued salmon and watching over their displays of handwork, stood to attention and joined the rest of the crowd in singing the national anthem.

SPEAK TO SCOUTS

The royal pair paused on their wood-chip-strewn way to the reception dais to speak to Scouts, Guides, Cubs and Brownies who lined it.

Then, on the dais, Mayor Pete Maffeo of Nanaimo presented mayors, reeves and commission chairmen from communities farther north on the Island; Robert Clifton, president of the B.C. Native Brotherhood; Rev. Peter Kelly, chairman of the brotherhood's legislative committee, and Nanaimo pioneer Mrs. Polly Johnston. The crowd applauded as the Queen and Prince Philip talked to Mrs. Johnston.

MASK DANCE

Mayor Maffeo escorted Queen Elizabeth down from the dais to the Indian village, and immediately Cowichan Indians burst from a cedar longhouse in a wild Mask Dance of welcome.

The dance evoked excited shrills even among the Indians. The Queen appeared impressed.

As part of the ceremony, Chief Elwood Modeste presented Her Majesty with a "talking stick," a staff with two feathers tied to the top. (The person who holds the talking stick has the floor at Indian meetings.)

INDIAN ICE CREAM

Touring the village, the Queen saw "Indian ice-cream"—soap berries and water or fish oil—being mixed by hand in a tub by Mrs. Nels Wilson of Nanaimo, but didn't taste it; nor did they taste the smoked and barbecued salmon prepared nearby by other members of the Nanaimo band.

At an exhibition of paintings by George Clutesi of Victoria, Prince Philip talked to little Bonnie Clutesi.

LOVELY SWEATERS

From Chief Ed Underwood, the Queen accepted four Cowichan Indian sweaters for herself, Prince Philip, Prince Charles and Princess Anne, and she told Mrs. Elsie Bob they were "very lovely."

Just before the Queen arrived there was a flurry when four-year-old Vicki White lost the feather out of her headband. Her mother retrieved it, dusted it off and replaced it.

"Isn't she used to wearing a feather?" someone asked. "She didn't even know she was an Indian until we started dressing her up this morning," her mother replied.

Queen Elizabeth is given Kwakiutl name Ar-oh-muthl by Chief Counsellor James Sewid of Alert Bay band on behalf of B.C. Native Brotherhood. With Queen is Nanaimo Mayor Peter Maffeo.

Victoria Greets Queen Warmly but Quietly

Excitement Ripples Along Waiting Streets

There was little flag-waving and not much cheering as Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip drove through Victoria streets on their arrival here shortly after 3.30 p.m. yesterday.

But there was no doubting the warmth of the city's welcome as an estimated 70,000 people lined the streets to see the royal couple drive to Government House.

Crowds began gathering all along the route—Trans-Canada Highway, Douglas, Yates, Cook and Rockland—as much as an hour before the royal car was due.

Excitement rippled along the streets in advance of the car as it passed through the city under a warm and brilliant sun.

CROWD GREW

At the entrance to Victoria, where the highway joins Douglas Street, a crowd which grew to several hundreds began assembling an hour before the royal procession reached the junction.

Among them were seven old-timers from Clovelly Nursing Home, including Mrs. Sarah Moules, 96.

WITHIN REACH

As the royal standard appeared in view there were cries of "Here they come," and "I can see her!" which swelled into cheering as the car swept between ranks of hand-wavers close enough for them to have touched it.

Blinking slightly in the strong sunlight, without the protection of dark glasses, the Queen and Prince Philip waved their greetings.

MASS IN MIDDLE

At the Roundabout, crowds massed on the circle green and strung out several deep at the Hillside intersection and south along Douglas Street.

By the time the red flasher of the police car heralded the Queen's oncoming, at precisely 3.40 p.m., the crowd had grown to thousands.

STRAIGHT THROUGH

Moving slowly, the royal car skipped the circle and made its way straight past on Douglas. Cameras clicked and children waved flags and shouted hurrah, and the big collective smile of their elders showed their warmth of feeling.

For an hour's wait the royal passage was but a fleeting gesture, but the Roundabout crowd seemed well pleased.

'CHAMPION'

"Champion!" said one man as the crowd dispersed; that seemed to sum up the general reaction.

Near the city hall, E. E. Smith, just one of the crowd which reached as far as anyone could see, wore his medals.

He had served under five monarchs.

BACK TO ROYAL NAVY

"And I'd serve again," he said. Mr. Smith is 80. His military career goes back to the time he was a messenger boy in the Royal Navy when Victoria was Queen.

A little away from him, W. A. Scott had brought a three-foot step ladder, the better to see the Queen.

Mr. Scott is not a royalist. But he's British.

'IT'S AN ODD THING'

A tall American, with a small Chinese girl on his shoulder, said: "Gosh, it's an odd thing. You feel something about these people. You'd call me a Yankee but right now I'm for the Queen. God bless her." Elihu Robb is a visitor from Santa Anita.

Half a dozen times the crowd surged forward off the sidewalks and into the street, but they were false alarms. Police Chief John Blackstock and constables, and some naval personnel, gently but firmly pushed the people back.

COULDN'T BE HELD

But when the royal car, with its standard, came abreast, nothing could have held the excited well-wishers back.

"God bless the Queen," shouted Mr. Smith.

People near him cheered. Twenty minutes before the royal procession arrived, spectators on Douglas Street started crowding onto the pavement.

City police tried to keep them back, but the crowd, more than 10 deep between the City Hall and Yates held its ground.

It was the same on Yates Street, and in this section alone it was estimated that more than 15,000 people saw the Queen.

DEEP BLACK

In the crowd were a number of Doukhobor women dressed in deep black.

One old lady with a camera got right into the front row.

When the royal car passed she turned to her companions and said, "She was so close I didn't have time to see her."

But she got her picture.

GATHER IN KNOTS

The trip down the Island south from Duncan was uneventful, with many stretches of the Malahat bare of people. Spectators tended to congregate, particularly where parking bays are provided along the highway at view points.

Several tourist cars managed to worm their way into the tail end of the royal cavalcade, with passengers waving graciously to people along the road, but the cars were cut out by official vehicles.

STOP FOR VIEW

The procession stopped for a few minutes at the summit of the Malahat to allow the Queen and Prince Philip to admire the view.

The first concentration of spectators was at the entrance to Goldstream Park, and from then on into the city there were always people along the side of the road. Heaviest concentration was about the Langford underpass, where several thousand people lined the route for more than a mile.

Seaman Crashes to Pavement After Wait in Boiling Sun

By TERRY HAMMOND

A 30-minute wait in blazing sun at the legislative buildings yesterday proved too much for a 26-year-old seaman who crashed to the pavement from the rigid ranks of the Queen's naval honor guard.

"This is the first time I ever fainted in my life and it would have to happen at this time," a crestfallen AB Fred Quakenbush, of Vancouver, said later.

Quakenbush fell face forward on the pavement at the foot of the legislative buildings steps about eight minutes before the royal party arrived for the official welcome by Premier Bennett. But in true military tradition not a single man in the squad looked down or twitched an eyelid.

A startled cry of "Oh" went up from hundreds of spectators as the young sailor pitched forward on top of his rifle, his face narrowly missing the dagger-sharp bayonet. Two sailors posted nearby for just such an emergency dashed forward and carried Quakenbush to a place of concealment while a third seaman filled the vacancy in the front rank.

"We had six spares on hand," Lt.-Cmdr. H. E. T.

Lawrence, honor guard commander, said later.

"I knew it was coming," Seaman Quakenbush said later. "I tried everything to prevent it. I held my breath and I tried changing my point of vision."

"Suddenly everything went black."

"We practised this for a lot longer than we waited today."

The embarrassed sailor admitted he was lucky his collapse came before the arrival of the Queen and Prince Philip. "If he'd fallen after they came," said a petty officer, "we would have had to leave him there where he fell. Those were our orders."

CHEMAINUS — Queen Elizabeth's presence brought the striking IWA and officers of MacMillan & Bloedel together for lunch at the Mt. Brenton golf course at Chemainus yesterday.

The luncheon, held on the fourth fairway under trees and gaily-colored beach umbrellas, was sponsored by the huge lumber company.

As a matter of course, when the guest list was being prepared weeks before the 11-day-old IWA strike, which has closed down the Chemainus sawmill, IWA plant chairman A. McEwan and Mrs. McEwan were included.

The topic of labor disputes was studiously avoided by guests at the luncheon.

The fairway was a garden setting with trees shading the closely-cropped grass and picnic-style tables scattered about.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip spent about 50 minutes in a specially-furnished trailer to rest and freshen up. Flowers and shrubs planted around the trailer aided the garden illusion.

STANDARD FLOATS

The royal standard floated above the fairway in a slight breeze, with Fuller's Lake in the background.

Among those at the large, round table with the Queen and Prince Philip were H. R. MacMillan, B. P. Page, J. V. Clyne, Mrs. Prentice Bloedel, Mrs. H. S. Foley and Mrs. Clyne.

The menu, chosen by Mrs. Clyne, featured seafood—Tofino crab legs, two kinds of shrimp, salmon, Alaska black cod, rare roast beef, potato salad, cress sandwiches, sauces, chutney and horseradish.

Queen Elizabeth refused Rose Pommand and French sauterne, sipping ginger ale with her meal. Prince Philip drank gin and tonic.

The couple chatted informally with their table companions, laughing freely. Prince Philip left the table after finishing a first plateful to help himself to a second serving of the seafood.

Reports Like Gunshots

Flashbulbs Startle Tired, Nervous Queen

Mountie Automatically Goes Into Crouch

A tired Queen Elizabeth looking strained and nervous after 39 days in Canada was twice startled yesterday when photographers' flashbulbs exploded like gunshots within a few feet of her.

On the first occasion, at Exhibition Park in Nanaimo just a few minutes after she had stepped ashore from HMCS Assiniboine, the sound was so similar to a pistol shot that reporters saw one RCMP constable automatically go into a crouch in the ready-to-draw position.

The Queen recoiled again yesterday afternoon just prior to the tri-services march-past when a bulb exploded across the street from her reviewing stand.

BORN OF FATIGUE

But the signs of a nervousness born of fatigue were mixed with the famous royal smile and, when the riflebutts of the naval honor guard crashed to the pavement perilously close to the toes of the sailors as they presented arms, outright laughter.

A crowd estimated at 10,000 people cheered the royal couple from the time they came in view until they took their places on the legislature steps.

They stood in irregular lines along every barricade and they filled the lawns. With them they brought cushions, collapsible chairs and even shooting sticks.

WITH CAMERAS

And they came with cameras. Old ladies with cameras, children with cameras, couples with cameras—cameras which cost $2.50 and cameras which you couldn't buy for $250.

Cheers of the crowd and the click of camera shutters reached a spontaneous crescendo when the Queen stepped out of her shiny limousine wearing a flowered pink and white silk dress, a hat of tulle petals shading from pink to white, and backless high-heeled shoes.

On her left shoulder blazed a maple leaf in diamonds, a diamond bracelet encircled her left wrist and around her neck was a three-strand string of pearls.

PALE BEIGE SUIT

Prince Philip wore an informal tropic-weight pale beige suit with a striped shirt, black shoes and a brown tie.

He was deeply tanned, in sharp contrast to the Queen, and carried himself with complete assurance.

Throughout the speech of welcome by Premier Bennett, and the reply by the Queen, he maintained an immobile smile, occasionally shifting his weight from one leg to the other.

Although movements of the royal couple in the vicinity of the legislature had been published on several occasions, policemen and commissioners were taxed with further enquiries.

One woman wanted to know if the Queen would be on horseback and a little girl charged up to a Frontiersman guarding the Cenotaph with the question "What does the Queen look like?"

"Why, she's extremely attractive," said the guard.

A minute later the youngster sat down on one corner of the monument and when the guard asked her to move along she asked "Why, is that where the Queen is going to sit?"

A childhood highlight came to 11-year-old Lynne Moorhouse, Victoria, who presented to the Queen a bouquet of yellow roses tied with a green ribbon—a combination which couldn't have failed to gladden the hearts of nearby Social Credit cabinet ministers, whose party colors they are.

BROWNIE UNIFORM

Lynne, dressed in a Brownie uniform, presented the bouquet on behalf of Victoria Girl Guides and Brownies.

Said the Queen, whose eight-year-old daughter Princess Anne became a Brownie recently, "Oh, they're lovely. Thank you so much."

After the ceremony on the legislature steps the royal pair stepped inside where they met 60 MLAs and their wives and chatted informally.

On the way to the march-past they stopped and chatted briefly with a group of veterans near the entrance.

The Queen spoke with RCN veteran "Clink" Baker who recalled afterwards "she was very easy and seemed to have more to say than Prince Philip."

Safety Belts For Driver, Not Royalty

The luxurious, specially-built limousine being used by the Queen and Prince Philip features safety belts for the driver and the person riding alongside the driver, but none for the royal passengers.

Miniature control panels control lighting and a sliding glass partition. Special seat cushions make the ride as comfortable as possible.

On the armrest dividing the two rear seats yesterday was a tourist folder about Vancouver Island and an oil company folder of maps of Victoria and Vancouver.

Memories to Cherish

"We shall long cherish memories of our visit to British Columbia," Queen Elizabeth said in her speech read at official welcoming ceremonies here yesterday.—(Colonist photo.)

Queen Can Talk to Home On 10 Seconds Notice

Special communications facilities arranged at Victoria's Government House will enable the Queen to talk to her children in England on 10 seconds' notice.

A B.C. Telephone Company official said yesterday that a special trunk line connects Government House with the long-distance panel at the Victoria switchboard.

He said that if Prince Charles or Princess Anne were near a telephone, the Queen could be talking to them 10 seconds after placing her call.

He said no special operator would take the call, but that it would be placed on an emergency basis and given top-priority on the trans-Atlantic cable system.

Formal Greeting

Carrying bouquet of yellow roses decorated with green ribbon, Queen Elizabeth stands on steps of the legislative buildings with Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett. In background are some of the B.C. cabinet ministers who attended ceremonies.—(Colonist photo.)

Umpire Frank Dascoli isn't getting a well-aimed kick from San Francisco Giants manager Bill Rigney—it just seems that way. Dascoli has just evicted Rigney from the game after protesting a

Olmedo Thrown Out After Listless Match

CHICAGO (AP)—Angry officials threw Wimbledon champion Alex Olmedo out of the United States Clay Court Tennis tournament Thursday after he disappointed spectators with a sloppy, listless performance in losing to Abe Segal of South Africa 6-2, 6-1, 6-0.

They defaulted the 23-year-old top-seeded "Chief" and his unblamed doubles partner, Earl Buchholz Jr. of St. Louis, from further competition in doubles "in the interest of better tennis for the spectators and the players."

The officials said they intended to file an official protest with the United States Lawn Tennis Association. George Barnes, USLTA first vice-president, said the group "will likely consider disciplinary action. What that will be I don't know."

Olmedo said at his hotel after learning he had been defaulted:

"I'm very sorry that everything happened that way. Everything got out of hand. I'm going to come over there later and talk to everybody."

Segal, 28-year-old South African never before met Olmedo in singles but had teamed with fellow countryman Gordon Forbes to defeat Olmedo and Barry MacKay in a doubles match at the recent Wimbledon tournament.

Segal declared unhappily after the quarter-finals match: "I don't like to play like that. I went out there to play tennis. I don't know what was the matter with him."

Olmedo said he didn't know either.

PERFORMANCE IRONIC
Olmedo's performance was as ironic as it was amazing. He had just come from a luncheon at which a new film of instruction tennis for youngsters was shown. In the film, Olmedo demonstrated proper tennis strokes and serves.

As Segal retreated to the baseline to play his steady, all-out defensive game, Olmedo declined to charge to the net. He too lingered at the baseline, swiping listlessly at the South African's placements and repeatedly serving double faults.

Someone hurried to tell Perry Jones, United States Davis Cup team captain, that his star was losing badly. Jones attributed Olmedo's behavior to the champion's long trip here from Europe and to tremendous public attention he has received since starting for the Davis Cup team and winning the Wimbledon crown.

Olmedo arrived here late and missed the first two days of play.

"The boy's been under a terrific strain, awful pressure," Jones declared.

Yankees Sweep Indians; Chicago Back into First

Chicago took over the American League lead Thursday by splitting a doubleheader at Boston while Cleveland was losing two to the New York Yankees and dropping out of the top place for the first time in a month.

As a result of this combination of events, the White Sox hold a one-game edge over the Indians. The Yanks still are fourth, 5 1/2 games back.

Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra and Bobby Shantz were the big land took a 5-4 lead in the eighth when a collision between left fielder Tony Kubek and shortstop Gil McDougald led in one run and set up another. Kubek suffered a slight concussion in the collision and was carried off the field.

Ryne Duren who came into the game in the eighth with a string of 31 1/3 scoreless innings, finally was scored on as a result of the collision.

Berra's homer tied it in the ninth and Mantle's 19th, following a single by Bobby Richardson, broke it up in the 10th with two out.

Enos Slaughter and Hank Bauer hit home runs in the second game to back up Shantz' fine pitching.

NEW WESTMINSTER

(CP)—New Westminster

O'Keefe's moved into an 11-point lead Thursday at the head of Inter-city Lacrosse League standings defeating second-place Vancouver

Carlings 13-9 before 2,281 fans here.

New Westminster led all the way, 5-2 at the end of one period, 10-2 at half time and 12-4 at the end of the third period.

League-leading scorer Jack Bionda, well on his way to establishing a new Canadian scoring record, was again top scorer for New Westminster, counting three goals and four assists. Bionda now needs only 13 points in his remaining eight games to top the record of 127 points set in 1956 by Nanaimo's Bob Allan. The all-time record is 135 points scored on a larger goal by New Westminster's Bill Wilson in 1957.

New Westminster's other goals were scored by Bill Jobb, Ken Oddy, Don Sepka and Cliff Sepka, each with two, and Harold Fox and Ivan Stewart with singles.

Vancouver's top scorer was Bob Babcock with two goals and one assist, while Bill Barbour, scored twice. Other Carlings goals came from Ron Hemmerling, Pete Ball, Fred Uzzelman, Bill Chisholm and Gord Gimple.

Goalie Les Norman handled 26 shots in the New Westminster net, while Dave Unwin and Harry Preston, who shared duties for Vancouver, stopped 32 shots during the game. Unwin was taken out of the game in the third period when he received a penalty outside his crease, an unusual event in lacrosse.

Vancouver was assessed a total of 19 minutes in penalties, in the rough contest, while New Westminster received six.

Can a Man Park at a Meter?

LONDON (AP) — British traffic authorities were trying Thursday to decide if a man can legally park himself at a parking meter for automobiles.

The son of the late H. G. Wells is one of the principals involved in this neat little issue of English ethics. What happened was this:

Professor George Philip Wells, who was 58 yesterday, is professor of zoology at London University. Driving to the Savile Club for lunch, the professor sighted a parking space. Just as he was about to back his car into it, he saw a man standing in the street in front of a ticking meter.

"Excuse me," Wells called out from the driver's seat, "but I'd like to park where you're standing."

"Sorry," said the man, "but I'm parked here."

"You can't park there," replied the professor with considerable logic, "you're a man, not an automobile."

"I'm well aware of that," rejoined the man, "but I'm parked here until my brother arrives in his car."

"Nonsense," muttered the professor to himself as he slowly but firmly backed his vehicle into the space.

"Sir," said the man, "that's unethical."

Unethical or ethical, the professor parked.

Who was right?

"The man was right," said the Automobile Association.

"The man was wrong," said the Westminster City Council.

"We don't honestly know," said the ministry of transport. And there hangs the issue.

Over Appointment

Labor Men Patch Rift With Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's two central labor bodies and the federal government have patched up their big rift over a controversial appointment to the unemployment insurance commission.

The Canadian Labor Congress and the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor withdrew representatives from the unemployment insurance advisory committee in April over appointment of Alastair MacArthur of Toronto to the three-man commission.

The CLC has told the government it wants representation on the committee and has nominated two men.

The CCL has nominated President Roger Mathieu of Montreal.

Informants said Labor Minister Starr has recommended that all three nominees be accepted.

MPs Urge Shake-Up To Boost CBC Morale

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Commons Broadcasting Committee called yesterday for an administrative shake-up to end confusion and restore morale at the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The committee said the "weak" administrative structure was a major factor in the troubles which have plagued the publicly-owned corporation in recent months.

It recommended the CBC board of directors give immediate consideration to a thorough reorganization of the administration.

The committee also said a limit should be placed on the amount of public funds the corporation receives each year to defray operating losses. This amount totalled $54,120,000 in the year ended March 31.

The committee's 1,500-word report, tabled in the House of Commons, contained only 32 words of praise for the corporation. These commended the basic aims of the CBC.

Fur Collars, Bright Satins New Fall Fashion—for Men

By MARY PRIME
NEW YORK (UPI) — Men's fashions for fall and winter turn a gentleman into a bit of a dandy. And it's the woman's fault as usual.

Styles shown yesterday for 230 visiting fashion reporters included coat and jacket linings in fake fur pile, quilted satin, wool and striped satin. Most linings were in bright colors and vivid patterns. The new clothes included "Rex Harrison" hats and sweaters, fake fur collars, Dolman sleeves, plaid trousers and car coats.

For the first time, men's evening clothes will be tropical weight for winter—an idea stolen from the ladies.

"We have discovered that warmth is not a consideration in evening wear," said the show's commentator. "After all, the ladies are covered up on top only enough to get by the law."

To show that men's wear designers have the woman shopper in mind, the styles included a grey tweed jacket with a red lining and red facing on the reverse side of the collar, meant to be worn turned up. Red was chosen, said the commentator, because "women love to buy red for men."

Nearly-Completed School Gutted by Fire at Saseenos

Fire caused an estimated $20,000 damage to the new elementary school at Saseenos yesterday morning, just as painters were about to start work on the not-yet-completed structure.

Caused by sparks from a plumber's torch, the flames swept quickly through the one-storey, three-room building, but Sooke volunteer firemen had the blaze under control in three-quarters of an hour.

The school, slated for occupancy in the fall, was being built at a cost of $38,540. Roof and walls were left standing, but little more.

Reconstruction of the building, fully covered by insurance, is expected to start as soon as possible. Pupils who would have used the school will be accommodated at Sooke elementary school.

Three major silhouettes were shown—the ivy, continental, and American neutral. Although most men wear and continue to wear the American neutral, the ivy style is strong. And in one year, the continental look has almost equalled the ivy in acceptance, a show spokesman said.

CAR SALES HIGHER
Ford Motor Company of Canada reports that its June sales of domestic-built cars were up 46 per cent from a year ago, and that its sales of English Fords for the month were up 80 per cent from June, 1958. Combined sales were up 50 per cent for June and 18 per cent for the first six months of the year.

Boost for Art, Music Proposed in Grants

Art and music will get a bigger boost from the city's annual approximate $25,000 in charitable grants, if recommendations brought down by the finance committee of council yesterday are followed.

The committee report recommended $3,500 for the Victoria Symphony Society and $2,500 for the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

Both grants are an increase of $1,000 more than last year.

Included in the list of proposed grants are $2,884.20 for Greater Victoria Celebrations Association, $2,446 to the YWCA, $4,416 to the YMCA, $4,025 to the Aged Women's Home, $500 to Queen Alexandra Solarium, $400 to Legion of Frontiersmen, $820 to the Navy League of Canada, $2,081 to the Sara Spencer Foundation, $25 to City Police Revolver Club, $139.20 to B.C. Rugby Association for B.C. all-star team tour of Japan, $161 to the Girl Guides, $352 to Boy Scouts, $15 to Victoria Gyo Club for permits for recent hole-in-one contest.

Clover Point Rally

Holidays May Cut Child Attendance

Fire Quelled

Crews Save Garage

Fire which flared up just after 1.30 p.m. yesterday at the Gorge Vale B-A service station, Craigflower and Tillicum, brought both Esquimalt and HMC Dockyard pumps to the scene.

Firefighters had the blaze under control before it spread from rear storage rooms to the main garage.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Exact cause and extent of damage had not been determined yesterday.

Station lessee I. G. Wreggitt, 552 Tait, in the station only a couple of weeks, and mechanic Fred Graves, were in the front office when they noticed smoke in the garage.

TOO HOT

They found the smoke coming from the door to the back rooms, but were prevented by the heat from investigating further. They turned in an alarm, then moved two cars out to the parking lot.

One of the cars, its front wheels off, had to be pushed out on a mobile jack.

Seen in Passing

Howard Lim working for the summer months in the Victoria College library. (He is a student at the college where he is taking psychology. He has five brothers and two sisters and lives with his mother at 859 Queens. His hobby is reading.) ... Brian Hoole standing at the side of his car with a union jack and hat over his chest as the royal procession passed ... H. Lee Briggs on a shopping tour ... Murray Dunnette and John Bamford talking about the lumber strike ... Henrietta Rae looking for pictures of the Queen ... Mel Federson preparing a milkshake ... Leo Korak carrying a loaded tray.

All Children Welcome

Summer holiday timing of the royal tour has robbed many Canadian children of the chance to see the Queen and the pattern may be repeated in Victoria today.

Organizers of the children's rally at Clover Point where space was originally allotted for 10,000 youngsters said last night calculations indicated there might be only 4,000 to 5,000 on hand.

One group of 950 members said its numbers were so scattered because of holiday activities there might only be 20 of its membership at the rally.

Throughout the tour children's gatherings to view the Queen have been smaller than anticipated.

Officials said space would be found for all children at the Clover Point rally even though they did not come under an organized group.

CHILDREN WELCOME

"This is not intended to interfere in any way with the organized groups," they said. "However, any parents wishing to bring children in cars to the rally are welcome to do so and should park their cars in the vicinity of area bounded by Cook, Faithful, Howe and Wellington."

No special car permits are required for parking in the reserved and policed areas.

Oak Bay children will have to avail themselves of the private family plan to attend the rally. The municipality's playgrounds committee said last night it would be too much responsibility for 25 supervisors to look after the 500 children registered with the playgrounds program.

They said the five playgrounds under the association would be closed so parents could take their own children and that the parents had been notified.

Saanich and Victoria playgrounds associations were each anticipating about 1,000 of children registered with their programs would be at Clover Point at 2.40 p.m. to greet the Queen.

Playgrounds will be closed and supervisors on duty at allotted sections in the rally area.

Part of Saanich Faces Voluntary Water Curb

Saanich Reeve George Chatterton last night issued a plea for voluntary sprinkling restrictions in his municipality.

He said the Persimmon Drive and Ascot Road areas are completely without water from 6 to 9 each night. The situation in these areas will be remedied next year.

"But," he said, "since the present shortage in these areas creates real hardship, particularly to families with children, I appeal to the people of Saanich to impose voluntary restrictions on sprinkling between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. while the warm weather lasts."

'Keenly Interested, Very Pleased'

Units of Three Services Put on Polished Display

Close to 1,000 men of Canada's three armed services put on a polished display for the Queen here yesterday.

Defence Minister George Pearkes told The Colonist after parade that Her Majesty was "keenly interested—and very pleased."

At one time, the Queen was so engrossed in conversation with Mr. Pearkes that she failed to spot approach of the army contingent until the officers, with swords stiffly at the salute, were opposite the reviewing stand on Belleville.

LITTLE SMILE

The Queen straightened quickly and took a half-pace forward with a little self-conscious smile.

Mr. Pearkes said the Queen showed a keen interest in the units of all three services and asked where each trained and the history of the unit.

Thousands of spectators cheered as the royal couple moved down a central walk to the Belleville Street reviewing stand. A group of youngsters who had clambered into the branches of a tree near the statue of Queen Victoria, great-great-grandmother to the present Queen, were rewarded with a wave and a smile from the royal couple.

He said afterward that the Prince was interested in the navy's officer-training plan and "seemed easy to talk to."

In the march-past were color parties of the navy, army and air force; bands of each of the services; 360 officers and men from ships and shore establishments of Pacific Command; 180 officers and men of the army, and 180 officers and men of the RCAF.

Capt. (L) J. C. Gray, RCN, was parade commander.

RCMP MOVE IN

Crowds gathered around the royal car as it left the reviewing stand and scarlet-coated RCMP moved in to hold spectators in check.

The Queen, gingerly avoiding the sun-heated top of her open car as she stood to wave, retired to Government House, where she and Prince Philip attended a dinner dance.

Doukhobor Mothers Plead to Speak to the Queen

Approaching RCMP guard at Government House gate last night to ask whether they could speak to Queen Elizabeth was a four-woman Doukhobor delegation from Krestova, B.C., accompanied by Vancouver Island Doukhobors. Black-clothed delegation, in mourning for children detained at New Denver, want to ask the

Cubs Get Look at Mountie Hero

RCMP hero and winner of the George Medal for bravery, Cpl. Bud Johnston, of Qualicum detachment, became the main attraction for first Crofton Cubs Brian Hall, left, and John Eford, both 10 years old, while waiting for the Queen and Prince Philip in Chemainus. Corp. Johnston was shot twice in both his arms, three times in the chest and once in the hip when he captured two or three armed robbers three years ago when they attempted to hold up a Coquitlam bank.

Vivi, a soprano, will sing "I Enjoy Being a Girl" from the Rodgers and Hammerstein Broadway show "Flower Drum Song." Vivi intends to go on to the University of British Columbia.

Government House Gate

Sect Women Plead in Vain

By JACK FRY

A Doukhobor delegation of four women clad in black mourning clothes presented themselves at Government House gate last night in an effort to obtain an audience with Queen Elizabeth.

RCMP refused them permission to enter the grounds, but accepted a note addressed to the Queen, promising to deliver it to "the proper party."

The women, Ann Jmaeff, Margaret Konkin, Polly Ribalkin and Ann Perepolkin, all of Krestova, B.C., mothers of children in the provincially-operated school at New Denver, said they came here hoping to speak to the Queen about their plight and to seek her intervention in obtaining summer holidays for their children who are not permitted to return home.

TWO APPEARANCES

They made two appearances at Government House between 8.15 and 9.15 last night.

Accompanied by a number of Doukhobors from Vancouver Island led by Joseph Podovnikov of Hilliers, they approached RCMP at Government House at 8.15, announcing they would like to see the Queen.

RCMP replied that the Queen is a guest of the provincial government and that if the delegation sought an audience it would move to go through the provincial government.

WAITED AN HOUR

The delegation waited nearly an hour at their cars parked on the north side of Rockland Avenue opposite Government House main gate, then penned a short note addressed to the Queen.

It read: "We, the delegation of four Doukhobor mothers from Krestova sent a telegram to Her Majesty the Queen addressed to Government House."

DESPERATELY CONCERNED

"We now are anxious to know if it is at all possible to have personal audience with the Queen. We are desperately concerned about our little children at New Denver."

Mrs. Polly Ribalkin handed the note to an RCMP corporal who read the message and promised to "deliver it to the proper party. It'll go through various channels."

The corporal said he did not know when the note would be answered, and he asked the group to inquire about the reply at RCMP headquarters in the city.

'GRIEF, SORROW'

Mrs. Ann Jmaeff said the four were dressed in black "because of grief and sorrow over our children being kidnapped."

Three of her children are in New Denver.

Mrs. Polly Ribalkin, who has two children in the school, said she was not very hopeful an audience will be permitted by the Queen.

"I think they'll try to stall us off," she said.

TWISTED NERVOUSLY

Mrs. Margaret Konkin twisted a white handkerchief nervously about her fingers as she said: "I haven't been permitted to see my girl for the past two months."

The women had not received a reply from a 500-word telegram sent earlier yesterday from Nanaimo, addressed to Queen Elizabeth at Government House.

Mr. Podovnikov said for the group: "We do not want to crash into arrangements made for the Queen and her husband, but we are not excluding the probability that divine providence will afford us an opportunity to put our case before the Queen."

Duncan Man Drowns

CHEMAINUS—A 50-year-old restaurant proprietor was drowned in waters off Tent Island near here about 6 p.m. yesterday when he apparently swam out too far from shore and was unable to make his way back.

The drowning victim was Albert Kidd of Coronation Avenue in Duncan. He was the proprietor of Bob's Grill on the Island Highway.

Dance is part of the RCNSA regatta weekend which starts Friday evening with a long distance race from Cadboro Bay around to Esquimalt Harbor. ### Queen Receives MLAs and Wives

A maple leaf of diamonds blazing on the shoulder of her pink and white silk dress, a froth of soft pink tulle framing her face, Queen Elizabeth, with Prince Philip, received MLAs in the chamber of the legislative buildings yesterday. Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett, wife of the premier, can be seen standing in the background. The premier is in the foreground, back to camera. Outside the buildings, upwards of 10,000 people waited to cheer.—(Bud Kinsman photo.)

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann: I'm 16 and going steady with a swell guy. For Valentine's Day he gave me a heart-shaped locket. I put the locket on February 14th and haven't had it off since. Now there's a green mark all around my neck from the chain.

I thought it was pure gold but my brother says it must be an imitation metal or it wouldn't do this. Is he right? Should I tell my boy friend? After all, if he paid for pure gold he should have gotten it. Please advise me in a hurry because my neck doesn't look very good.—DORA.

Dear Dora: I'm not surprised that your neck doesn't look very good if you haven't had the chain off since February 14th. How do you wash it?

"Pure gold" is very soft and not suitable for manufacturing jewelry, so I doubt that the jeweler misrepresented. The green mark on your neck doesn't mean the chain is cheap. Certain chemicals in the body are responsible. Just wipe the chain with a soft cloth occasionally, and for heaven's sake take it off when you wash your neck.

Everything Out

Dear Ann Landers: My hobby is radio, hi-fi and TV repairing. Until recently I had the privilege (?) of occupying about 40 square feet of floor space in the utility room behind the kitchen. A few days ago my wife decided my equipment was an eyesore and she moved everything out to the garage. The car, she said, would have to sit in the driveway.

When I suggested she move her sewing machine out to the garage she ignored me. I make more money from my hobby than she saves from hers. Furthermore my equipment is no more an eyesore than her sewing machine and the patterns, materials, pins and thread scattered all over the place.

What is your opinion considering climatic conditions in an unheated garage and its effect on delicate electronic equipment?—NEARLY HOUSEBROKEN.

Dear Nearly: I don't know anything about climatic conditions and electronic equipment, but I DO know something about emotional climate and marriage when a wife summarily moves her husband's income-producing hobby out to the garage.

Move your equipment back to the utility room and tell her the car belongs in the garage. Make it clear you expect equal rights and you'll not tolerate being treated like a small boy who clutters up the house with toys and junk.

First Came as Princess

She Returns a Queen

By EILEEN LEAROYD

The lovely young girl who came to us as a princess in 1951, has returned a Queen.

She is perhaps lovelier than she was before. But her new poise and confidence happily never seem to overshadow a certain becoming feminine fragility.

She arrived at Government House wearing the same frock she had worn in Chelmsford, small black squares imposed on white silk, to be greeted by the lieutenant-governor and other dignitaries.

GOOD-LOOKING YOUTH

There ready to open the door of her car, was the Queen's footman, Basil Stibbs, of Windsor, Berkshire, a good-looking youth dressed in navy blue "battledress" with red epaulets on the shoulders.

The Duke, so tanned his eyebrows looked white, wore a light grey suit and carried a brown fedora.

As their car drew up before the Government House Portico CPO George Mannix, of HMCS Naden, broke out the Royal Standard, assisted by P. O. Leonard Woolven, also of Naden.

18 POLICEMEN

There were six city police motorcycle men, 12 red-coated RCMP outriders and the woods and gardens around the mansion presented a strange sight as they were literally filled with plainclothesmen, Service Corps and RCE soldiers and naval provost corps.

Crowds around the gates of Government House who had begun gathering two hours in advance waved flags, cheered and crowded around the royal car.

PORTRAITS OF SELF

The first thing the Queen would see on entering the new Government House would be portraits of herself and Prince Philip done by Arthur Parr of England.

Inside, waiting to be presented were Mayor and Mrs. Percy Scurrah, Rear Admiral and Mrs. H. S. Raynor, Air Commodore and Mrs. A. D. Ross, Brigadier and Mrs. J. W. Bishop and assistant commissioner J. E. Lemieux and Mrs. Lemieux.

Garden Notes

Foxglove Irresistible

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

The foxglove family is really outstanding for its beauty. You know the general habit of the plant—an attractive rosette of large, handsome leaves out of which arises a three to four-foot column of exquisite flowers.

There is something irresistible about the perfect formation of the drooping, finger-shaped florets on the spike, and the way they arrange themselves so every bloom can be seen. The coloring is wonderful in its range and shading, too—in the Shirley strain, for instance, you have pink, bronze and crimson as the ground color, with contrasting eye-spots. Whites, pinks, creams and yellows are featured in the Gloxinoides strain, so named because the flowers are almost the equal of a greenhouse Gloxinia. The Excelsior strain, new only a few years ago, has flowers all round the stem instead of facing only one way.

With a good collection of foxgloves, you will not only solve the problem of that shady spot which receives so little sun, but this problem spot can become one of the real beauty spots in your garden. Not that the foxglove will grow only in shade—it will perform equally well in a sunny perennial border, providing plenty of humus-making organic material is worked into its planting site.

The easiest way to get started with foxgloves is by sowing seed in July. The seed is very small, but reasonably fresh seed germinates surely, and in about 20 days a fine stand of seedlings should appear.

Choose a shaded location for the seed bed, and dig it over to the full depth of the spade. If you have any leafmould, incorporate half a bucketful per square yard, for the foxglove is a woodland plant and has a natural affinity for fallen leaves in its root run.

Break up the lumps by banging them with the back of the digging fork, then walk all over the bed to consolidate it. Rake it down to a fine tilth, then scatter the seeds very thinly, and cover with not more than a quarter-inch layer of sifted soil.

Watering is a bit of a problem, for the soil must not be allowed to dry out for a crust, yet any splashing will dislodge the tiny seeds and may carry them to a depth too great for germination. One old-time gardener's method which has worked well for me is to cover the sown seed with wet sacks, and if any further watering should be needed before the seedlings appear, water right through the sack. Remove the sacks as soon as the seedlings show—better lift the sack and take a daily peek—and if any weeds have come up too, take them out by hand. When the plants have made their fourth leaf, lift each one carefully on the point of your trowel, and transplant to a nursery bed at six inches apart.

The depth of planting is very critical, both on the move from the seed bed to the nursery plot, and again in early October when you shift the plants to their permanent flowering quarters. Like a strawberry plant, the growing point must be clearly above soil level, for if this is buried under soil, the plant will perish. Some gardeners set their plants in three-inch ridges of soil, so there can be no possibility of soil being washed in over the growing point after planting.

Most of our garden foxgloves are biennial, blooming and dying in the second year from seed. They seed themselves freely, though, so there is always a nice batch of husky young plants coming along to take the place of the time-expired ones.

Television in Review

By Fred Danzig

January in July with Andy

NEW YORK (UPI)—Summer TV has shown us just about all it has to offer, I guess, so this is as good a time as any to vote for "best" of the season.

My vote goes to the Andy Williams Show on CBS-TV. With two shows gone, it is clear that Andy has a show that is as informal as Brigitte Bardot's last beach party. Also, it is fresh. It swings. It experiments.

This week, for example, a successful experiment involved an Americanized version of a Japanese Kabuki dance, in which Miyoshi Umeki sang, "They Can't Take That Away From Me."

Not experimental but charming nonetheless was Andy's duet with Miss Umeki in "Getting to Know You." The comedy highlight, to my mind, was the brief bit by mime Frank Gorshin in the role of Boris

Karloff playing opposite a recording of Sir Cedric Hardwicke in Ibsen's "Enemy of the People."

Actually, the show is two shows in one. Andy features "The World of LP's," a segment that samples some off-beat record albums and finds song-and-dance inspiration in them. It's a solid hunk of entertainment and deserves to be preserved after the summer.

The credit for all this goes to Andy, who has a pleasing manner and is a swinging, tasteful singer; producer Perry Lafferty, director Norman Jewison, choreographer Peter Gennaro, music director Jack Kane & Co. They get my vote and my thanks for making summer-time Tuesday nights—one hour of it, at any rate—look like fall and winter TV at its best.

June Havoc, the world's foremost authority on stage mothers, played the part of a wacky stage mother Wednesday night in "The Pink Burro" on CBS-TV's U.S. Steel hour. It was a contrived play.

Miss Havoc wreaked havoc as she attempted to create show business stars out of every one who came close to her pink-colored roadside diner. That went for her customers and a Mexican "wetback" as well as her own daughter.

The portrait we get is one of a shallow, rather childish and stupid woman who brings near-disaster to her daughter and the wetback.

"Why can't I let people be?" asks Miss Havoc as she suddenly sees the error of her ways and begins facing reality. Just before the final scene, Her hubby, played by Edward Andrews, replies, "Because you care too much about 'em." He's a diplomat.

Jenny Another Fair Lady?

PARIS (NANA)—It's good news that the "Gigi." My Fair Lady "Brigadoon" creators Freddie Loewe and Alan Jay Lerner are currently in the south of France, working at a fine pace on their new musical, "Jenny Kissed Me," to star Laurence Harvey and Richard Burton on Broadway in the fall. In between songs and lyrics, the boys cruise on the Mediterranean in "Freddie's Fair Fatima," as their yacht is called by the Cap d'Antibes set.

Can you imagine this—"Gigi," such a huge hit in the United States, England and elsewhere, was a flop in France. It was rereleased here after winning all those Oscars, but failed the second time too. Yet, when you think about it, it's understandable. If a French movie company made a picture about Washington, D.C. it might be boring for Americans. I remember the Jennifer Jones-Charles Boyer "Cluny Brown," which was all about high life in England, failed in Britain, but it was a hit in America.

Even though Ingrid Bergman's daughter, Jenny Ann, has received court order and half the fare from her father, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, to visit her mother in Europe, I learn here that Jenny Ann is more interested in getting a job in the U.S. this summer.

I also learn on very good authority that Ingrid and new husband Lars Schmidt are not expecting to be parents—not this year anyway. Ingrid keeps mum on these matters, but my source was positive.

The most popular Hollywood movie in Paris is "Al Capone." Most Frenchmen believe such pictures represent the way of life in America. Star Red Steiger is now in Rome and, by the strangest coincidence, so is his "Roshomon" leading lady, Claire Bloom, whom he is expected to marry.

Also—in easy French—"They say in Paris that Jean Seberg (ill-fated St. Joan for Otto Preminger) has become the most French of all the Americans to settle in France." Jean is married to a Frenchman, And Marshalltown, Iowa, is a million miles away.

Kay Kendall, speaking on the set of her Columbia movie, "Once More With Feeling": "After two years in New York, we came back to our native country (England). We were thrilled to be back in London, but the press—with one exception—was so mean to Rex (Harrison), and I found I was a most hated girl."

After their three-month vacation in Portofino, the Harrisons go to New York where Rex will star on stage in the Anouilh play, tentatively titled "Hullabaloo." "The doctors say I mustn't make any films for a couple of years," Kay said, "but I'll do an off-Broadway show for eight weeks, and a television spectacular."

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

passed, East decided to make it still tougher for South to enter the auction by bidding three hearts. As a result, the North-South pair arrived at five clubs instead of the superior contract of three no-trump. As East and West were not vulnerable, a double of three hearts would not have been as rewarding as a vulnerable game.

In the play of the hand, a keen declarer capitalized on the favorable opening lead, and made his contract. He won the heart ace, and ruffed a heart with the club jack. After leading a low club to the nine, he ruffed dummy's last heart, and played another trump. He then cashed the diamond ace and king, and put East on lead with a third diamond. East was now end-played; he had to lead a spade, allowing declarer to lose only one spade trick, and fulfill his contract. With an original spade lead the hand cannot be made—but West's choice was the normal one.

The major change in bidding in the United States in recent years is the adoption of "pre-emptive bidding" in many forms. Pre-emptive bidding is directed against the opponents. The idea is to deprive them of a chance to exchange information at the low levels when you suspect they have the better cards.

In today's deal, the West player opened a "weak two-bid," describing a hand limited in high-card value, and with a good six-card suit. Howard Schenken is largely responsible for originating this bid. When the North player,

Patch of Gulf Stream Wafts Scent to Britain

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—Ten bathing beauties on yachts dumped $25,000 worth of perfume and 300 gallons of red dye into the Gulf Stream 13 miles off Miami Beach.

Charlie Granville of Wilton, Conn., who happens to manufacture the scent, said this would create a mile-square, sweet-smelling area which will drift to Britain in time for Christmas.

Granville insists it is anything but a publicity stunt. "It's an international gesture of goodwill."

They Were too Much 'Bother'

'Bad' Boys Strangled

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—Kenneth Archie Merriam's recorded voice told a packed courtroom yesterday how the sons of his mistress died because they were "a bother."

The thick-tongued voice stumbled and mumbled out of a tape recorder on a table in front of the jury of six women and six men. The jury is hearing the case against Merriam and Mrs. Wanda Brogdon, 33, charged with murder.

The Illinois couple is accused of taking Mrs. Brogdon's sons, five-year-old Virgil, Jr., and three-year-old David, into the nearby Laguna Mountains May 2 and strangling them.

Merriam, 36, admitted shortly after the crime that he strangled the boys. But he pictured himself as an unwilling executioner, doing the bidding of their mother.

"Why did you do it?" he was asked.

Through the jumble of words came the explanation: "They wouldn't mind or anything else."

Merriam told of an incident when one of the boys had damaged his car.

"I told her," the voice of the defendant said, "Honey, you've got to do something with the kids."

Merriam said his lover, described by a psychiatrist as a high-grade moron, told him of a woman in Illinois who had "got rid of" her oldest boy by killing him.

Parking Lot Needs Doom Old Market

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—What the repeating rifle did to the buffalo, the modern supermarket is doing to Tennessee mountain farmer Charlie Price.

Charlie belongs to a dwindling group of mountain men who make a living hawking their farm and forest products in Knoxville's 105-year-old Farmers' Market.

"Yes, sir," Charlie said, "people don't come here like they used to. The supermarkets are taking the trade."

"Some days I make a profit. Mostly I don't. But me, my wife and boy, we raise everything country folks can raise on a farm."

Three days a week, 62-year-old Charlie Price gets up at 4:30 a.m. He loads a battered pickup truck with produce and drives to Knoxville in time to be there when the market opens at 6.

A lot of the produce, business and tradition of the Farmers' Market is fast disappearing.

Market master C. E. Parker says fewer and fewer farmers even bother to bring their wares to town.

And businessmen and city officials are in favor of tearing down the place to make room for more parking lots.

17-Year-Old Faces Trial

Stanley John Bullivant, 3521 Douglas, was committed for trial in higher court at conclusion of a preliminary hearing in Saanich police court this week.

The 17-year-old youth, transferred to open from juvenile court, was charged with breaking, entering and theft last June 23 at the Parkdale Service Station, Douglas and Saanich Road.

Bail was set at $2,000.

Traffic Fines

Leslie George Collier, 110 Wildwood, exceeding 30, $25.

Skidway for Slides

Like huge children's slide, this new "avalanche funnel" is designed to protect much-travelled road around Walchensee Lake in West Germany. Snow and rock slides often block the road at this point, but new slide is designed to slip future avalanches over the highway and into the Bavarian lake.

Record Flow of Tourists Sets Vancouver Record

VANCOUVER (CP)—A record number of tourists visited Vancouver during June despite poor weather. Nearly 95,000 tourists passed through lower mainland ports of entry, a 3.4 per cent increase over the same period of 1958. The total for the first six months of 1959 was 364,000, more than three per cent greater than one year ago.

Stop Propaganda, Get Down to Cases

GENEVA (UPI)—Secretary of State Christian Herter Thursday called on Russia to stop trying to make propaganda and buckle down to working out an agreement on the Berlin crisis.

He challenged Russia's Andrei Gromyko to cut out "bogus slogans" like a "free city" of West Berlin and get down to seeking specific improvements in the crisis rather than mere change of names.

Herter emphasized that the basic problem was to make arrangements that would maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and prevent new crisis before Germany is reunited.

The American secretary warned Gromyko that another

Berlin crisis flare-up could plunge the world into war. He suggested calling on the United Nations to help police a Berlin truce agreement.

Herter appealed to Gromyko across the Big Four conference table to consider bringing an adequate UN staff into Berlin.

The staff, with free access to both West and East Berlin, would report on propaganda activities that might disturb the public order or seriously affect the rights of others.

The key item in the Soviet proposals is establishment of an all-German committee in which the Communist East Germans would have an equal voice with the West Germans.

The western powers fear such a commission ultimately would result in handing over all Germany to Communist domination.

Negro Report on Year's Progress

'Beginning of the End' For Diehard Racists

NEW YORK (AP)—An annual report of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sees "the beginning of the end" of massive resistance to desegregation in the south.

The report says segregationists lost ground on every front during 1958. The report also said Negroes were particularly hard hit by the economic recession.

The report saw these developments during 1958 as examples of segregationist losses:

1. The U.S. Supreme Court decision on Little Rock schools reaffirming the school desegregation decision of 1954.
2. The election of a liberal Congress, increasing chances of enactment of stronger civil rights legislation.
3. The election in the South of Senators Albert Gore of Tennessee and Ralph Yarborough of Texas, both Democratic moderates.
4. Public reaction to the closing of public schools in Little Rock and in three Virginia cities.
5. Public reaction to the bombing of schools, churches and synagogues.

Scares Women 'Half to Death'

Harmless Seaman Goes Adrift

MONTREAL (CP)—A 20-year-old seaman who wandered into a home in the early morning, frightening three women "half to death," was freed of a loitering charge for lack of evidence.

Chief Judge Roland Paquette dismissed the charge against Michael Hennessey of HMCS Bonaventure, Halifax.

Mrs. Paul Gervais testified she woke up shortly after 3 a.m. to find a strange man sitting near her bed.

"It scared me half to death. I started to scream and awakened my daughter and sister who live with me."

When the stranger made no move to molest any of them,

Mrs. Gervais asked him who he was and what he was doing there.

"He made no reply outside of saying 'shh, shh,' and motioned to us to keep quiet."

Hennessey later told police he had been drinking. He met a friend and they started for the friend's home.

The friend got out first and walked into the house while Hennessey was paying for the taxi, Hennessey said, and "in following him I apparently got into the wrong house."

Labrador Chosen For Ore Plant

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood said Thursday the Iron Ore Company of Canada will spend $75,000,000 next year to build an ore processing plant in the Carol Lake region of Labrador.

The new plant will process up to 6,000,000 tons of iron ore concentrates a year.

Damsite Problem

Spawners Spurn Easy Route Up

VANCOUVER (CP)—Persuading salmon to board elevators or escalators to get over power dams on rivers is a tough problem for scientists.

Salmon will splash around for days trying to leap over the dam before ever considering using the elevator, said Dr. Peter Larkin, director of the institute of fisheries, in an address here.

"We've tried dumping a substance containing the scent of a grizzly bear's paw to scare the salmon over in the direction of the elevator, but they soon get used to the smell."

"The problem has been solved on small rivers and dams where fisheries workers can keep the fish flowing through with a minimum of delay."

But the big delays on the big rivers like the Fraser would be fatal to the salmon who might spawn long before they reach the spawning grounds."

Library Service Delayed Today

Service to Victoria Public Library borrowers will be suspended this morning until 1 p.m., so that some 45 members of the library staff may attend public appearances of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

The library, which usually opens at 9 a.m., will open at 1 p.m. on Friday and remain open until 9 p.m.

Queenswood Subdivision Turned Down

An application to subdivide eight parcels of land totalling 15 acres, in the Queenswood area of Saanich, has been successfully opposed by residents of the area.

John H. Kilgour, 2494 Arbutus, had asked permission to subdivide the land. The application was in conflict with a special bylaw passed in 1946, preventing any further subdivision of land on Queenswood Drive.

Saanich council's lands and planning committee considered the application, held an informal discussion with opposing residents of the area, and recommended finally that council reject the application in its present form.

Mayor Fast On Draw In Gun Duel

STRAITHCLAIR, Man. (CP) — Mayor James Creighton of Brandon proved faster on the draw than Reeve Ken Rapley of Straithclair in a mock gun battle Wednesday on the main street.

Mr. Creighton fired three blanks before the Reeve had his gun out of the holster. Five hundred spectators watched as the contest was staged to climax the 75th anniversary parade of the village.

GOV. EARL LONG

Impeachment Move Foreseen

Long Set for Trouble

PECOS, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Earl K. Long announced yesterday, while eating a cantaloupe in the back seat of his limousine, that he expects a move to impeach him in a special session of the Louisiana legislature next month.

"I feel like the first bill that will come up will be an impeachment (bill)," Long, 63, said. "I'm ready," he added.

Long said he expects Rep. Jasper K. Smith of Caddo Parish, La., to introduce the bill to impeach him and if Smith wants him to, he (Long) will help introduce the bill.

Long set out yesterday with his personal physician and J. M. Menefee, head of the Louisiana (horse) Racing Commission, for El Paso, Tex.

Juarez, Mexico, noted far and wide for its gay night life, is across the border from El Paso and Long said he expects to sample it.

He said he will fly to Monterrey, Mexico today in a special plane waiting for him in El Paso. He will return to El Paso tonight and then go to the races at Ruidoso Downs, N.M.

After that he plans to visit, in order, Phoenix, Ariz.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; Kansas City, Mo., and Hot Springs, Ark., before returning to Louisiana Aug. 6 or 7 for the special session of the legislature.

One of the bills he expects to promote will be aimed at making it more difficult to commit a man to a mental hospital in Louisiana. Long has

Martyred Scientist In Agony 64 Years

CHICAGO (AP) — He lay there—a wreck of a man after 64 years of pain and 91 operations—one of the first victims of radiation.

He spoke from only half a mouth, and his words were sometimes bitter. The operations also have claimed his left hand, most of his nose, his upper lips and parts of his cheek and jaw.

He asks, "Why should I, an innocent individual, have to suffer like this? For 64 years I have known pain."

X-Ray Victim

The white-haired man is Dr. Emil H. Grubbe, 84, credited with being the first to apply radiation in an attempt to cure cancer.

He is scheduled to undergo Friday his 92nd operation for radiation burns and cancer resulting from some of his experiments. Doctors say they probably will have to remove two fingers from his right hand.

Dr. Grubbe gave a rare press conference Wednesday.

"I was the first one burned by radiation," he said.

He told of how in 1895, as a physicist, he worked on the manufacture of plutonium vacuum tubes called Crookes tubes, used to rarify gases.

Many times he touched the tubes or brought them near his face, not knowing of the danger. An irritation appeared on his hand, but he didn't know what it was.

Then on Nov. 8, 1895, the discovery of X-rays was announced by Wilhelm Roentgen.

"I knew then I had been burned by X-rays," Dr. Grubbe said. "But it was too late."

PRIME MINISTER
HAROLD MACMILLAN

Macmillan Eligible For Old-Age Pension

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's eyes popped open in surprise at the letter he had just received.

It was from the British Ministry of Pensions.

Inside was a cream-colored government form asking a number of questions.

Among them were:

Name of your employer...

Date of your retirement...

He answered the first question with "the tax-paying voters."

To the second, he replied, "I'm not thinking of retiring at the moment."

He asked his secretary to mail it back to the ministry. Then he promptly forgot about it.

But it's hard to have the last word with a government bureau—even if you're the prime minister.

In the return mail came another letter from the ministry, saying:

"When you decide to retire, please give three months notice, otherwise you may forfeit three months' pension."

British males are eligible for an old-age pension at the age of 65.

Macmillan is 65.

His New Leaf Was Crooked

Entertainer, Engineer —Something was Missing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A success at 24, by some standards, he wanted to start over—to turn the page and become an entirely new person.

That's why he worked so hard at his adopted trade—burglary—says Gordon Ellis Atteberry.

He was good at it. He says he carried off more than 200 burglaries, which netted him $100,000 or more. He kept three luxurious apartments at once. He eluded officers in almost 48 states, Canada and Mexico.

When caught, he was dropping his last nickel in a Reno, Nev., parking meter.

"I want to see what makes me tick," he said Wednesday on returning to Los Angeles. Atteberry worked successfully as a professional hypnotist, actor, writer and photographer of nudes. He studied engineering at two universities and is described as an expert at electronics.

Still, there was something lacking in his life. "I planned to reduce my age by five years, assume a new identity and eventually enter the University of Florida as a pre-medical student majoring in psychology," he says.

So he became a burglar.

"I'd been capering (committing burglaries) for at least five or six months," he said. "I averaged four or five jobs a night, very seldom ever taking a night off. I averaged in money about $100 a night."

Police got onto him after a husband complained Atteberry was stealing his wife.

Picture Highlights Of Tour Inside

Vancouver Island has been quivering with excitement, mounting by the minute, ever since the Queen of Canada and her husband stepped ashore at Nanaimo yesterday.

And for every minute there has been a thrilling highlight—many of which have been caught by Colonist photographers—see pages 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 18, 19.

Sifton

Colonist Joins Team

The Daily Colonist yesterday became a member of the newly-formed F-P company which will own or control five Canadian daily newspapers and one weekly, and have an interest in another daily.

Announcement was made by Victor Sifton, editor and publisher of the Winnipeg Free Press.

"In association with Mr. G. Max Bell of Calgary, I am incorporating a company to be known as F. P. Publications Ltd. with head office in Winnipeg. The new company will own or control the Ottawa Journal, Winnipeg Free Press, Free Press Weekly, the Calgary Albertan, Victoria Times, The Daily Colonist of Victoria. Also it will have a substantial interest in the Lethbridge Herald.

60 PER CENT

"Mr. Bell, together with his family and associates, hold a 40 per cent interest in the new company and my family and I hold 60 per cent.

"The officers and directors will be: Victor Sifton—chairman of the board; G. Max Bell, president; R. S. Malone, vice-president and general manager; Louise M. Sifton, director; Stuart Keate, director."

FREE PRESS OWNER

Since 1953, Mr. Sifton has been sole owner of The Free Press which was founded as a weekly in 1872, became the Prairies' first daily two years later and was acquired by the late Sir Clifford Sifton and the Sifton family in 1899.

Mr. Bell, publisher of The Albertan, is an internationally known oilman and sportsman, who also owned the Victoria Times and Colonist.

Mr. Malone is vice-president of The Free Press. Louise M. Sifton is Mr. Sifton's wife. Mr. Keate is publisher of The Times.

Goldfine May Go To Prison

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bernard Goldfine, a gift-giving friend of politicians, abandoned his defence Thursday against a contempt of Congress indictment. He thereby left himself open to a possible sentence up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Goldfine, 68-year-old Boston industrialist, whose favors to former White House aide Sherman Adams were investigated a year ago by Congress, was indicted for refusing to answer questions about the financial affairs of the Boston Port Development Company.

QUEEN'S SPEECH TO 10,000 CLIMAXES ISLAND WELCOME

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Heavy Crowds' Greeting Warm and Affectionate

By IAN STREET

Queen Elizabeth made her first speech in British Columbia from the steps of the legislative buildings here yesterday.

It was the highlight of a ceremony welcoming the royal couple to B.C., and the climax of a busy day in which she and Prince Philip visited an Indian village at Nanaimo, visited Chemainus and Duncan and then drove down to Victoria.

Everywhere they went on Vancouver Island, the royal couple was greeted with warmth and affection.

CROWDS ORDERLY

Quiet, orderly crowds lined the routes of the royal procession and looked on with deep interest at the ceremonies where stops were scheduled.

A crowd of almost 10,000 massed in front of the legislative buildings heard the Queen say she was impressed with the developments that have taken place in B.C. since she was here in 1951.

"I am very glad to be here once again this afternoon," she said in reply to an address of welcome given by Premier W. A. C. Bennett, "and thank you most sincerely for your kind welcome."

BEAMING PREMIER

The beaming premier, hatless, wearing a morning suit, said in his brief speech: "We are grateful you have had the opportunity during your visit to B.C. to enjoy a brief rest. And now that your visit is drawing all too soon to a close we earnestly hope that it will not be long before your loyal subjects may welcome you once again to this province."

"May God protect you always, Your Majesty and Your Royal Highness."

TEN MINUTES LATE

A flutter of excitement passed through the crowd of shirt-sleeved men and women in gay summer dresses as the appointed time for the queen's arrival came and went.

Finally at 5.20, 10 minutes behind schedule, the first shot of a 21-gun royal salute fired by the 5th Independent Medium Battery, RCA, boomed out across the Inner Harbor.

ANIMATED CHATTER

Brief ceremonies marking the official welcome were held on the steps of the legislative building.

The Queen chatted animatedly with the premier before stepping onto a dais to take the royal salute from an RCN royal guard and color party which had stood motionless for 30 minutes in temperatures topping 80-degrees.

The Queen smiled often as she walked quickly along the ranks of the naval guard accompanied by the guard commander, Lt.-Cmdr. H. E. T. Lawrence. She carried a parasol, but didn't bother to open it.

SHOWS FATIGUE

Mounting the steps to where members of the B.C. cabinet and other ranking officials waited, the Queen seemed suddenly to show the fatigue of a gruelling series of events which started with her arrival in Nanaimo at 10 a.m.

The Queen in her speech recalled the visit here last year of her sister, Princess Margaret.

She said that the visit in the last several days in "this rich and varied province" has shown that "yours is a favored region, amply blessed under the providence of God."

'AS YOUR QUEEN'

"As your Queen I have been impressed by the developments which have taken place since I was here last. I recall the foresight, the courage and the hard work of those who pioneered this vast land and I see that its people still possess the same qualities."

"I am confident, therefore, that this province faces a great and prosperous future, worthy of those who built it, and I pray that this may be so."

Typhoid Details Wanted

OTTAWA (CP)—The army and air force have sent urgent messages overseas asking for full details of a suspected outbreak of typhoid fever among 200 children of Canadian servicemen at a camp near Ilmuden, Holland.

Army and RCAF officials said the children are likely Boy Scouts. However, there was no indication whether they are the sons of army or air force personnel.

There are about 1,500 Canadian Boy Scouts in Europe, all sons of Canadian servicemen. Each summer groups camp in various parts of Europe.

Let UN Police Berlin Herter Urges Reds

GENEVA (UPI)—Secretary of State Christian A. Herter proposed yesterday that the United Nations be called in to help police an East-West Berlin truce agreement. Russia immediately vetoed the proposal.

Herter, warning that another Berlin crisis flare-up might plunge the world into war, made the suggestion to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the Big Four conference table.

The U.S. Secretary of State said that the U.S. government had been giving serious consideration to the possibility of a "significant UN role" in a Berlin crisis. He said the world organization could provide a form of "international scrutiny" in the divided city.

"I believe and have reason to hope from recent public statements of the UN Secretary General that he would be responsive to such a request for this form of United Nations participation in a Berlin settlement," Herter said.

Herter's proposal coincided with a series of talks in Geneva between visiting UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld and the individual big four foreign ministers.

Just Cheese, Fish Represent Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Churchill was chided Thursday for representing Canada with only packaged Ontario cheese and a case of British Columbia sockeye salmon at a London Commonwealth food exhibit.

He said no information was sent by Canadian trade officials in London in time to arrange for the exhibition.

Victoria Hails the Queen Warmly but Quietly

Excitement Ripples Along Waiting Streets

There was little flag-waving and not much cheering as Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip drove through Victoria streets on their arrival here shortly after 3.30 p.m. yesterday.

But there was no doubting the warmth of the city's welcome as an estimated 70,000 people lined the streets to see the royal couple drive to Government House.

Crowds began gathering all along the route—Trans-Canada Highway, Douglas, Yates, Cook and Rockland—as much as an hour before the royal car was due.

Excitement rippled along the streets in advance of the car as it passed through the city under a warm and brilliant sun.

CROWD GREW
At the entrance to Victoria, where the highway joins Douglas Street, a crowd which grew to several hundreds began assembling an hour before the royal procession reached the junction.

Among them were seven old-timers from Cloverly Nursing Home, including Mrs. Sarah Moules, 96.

WITHIN REACH
As the royal standard appeared in view there were cries of "Here they come," and "I can see her!" which swelled into cheering as the car swept between ranks of hand-wavers close enough for them to have touched it.

Blinking slightly in the strong sunlight, without the protection of dark glasses, the Queen and Prince Philip waved their greetings.

MASS IN MIDDLE
At the Roundabout, crowds massed on the circle green and strung out several deep at the Hillside intersection and south along Douglas Street.

By the time the red flasher of the police car heralded the Queen's oncoming, at precisely 3.40 p.m., the crowd had grown to thousands.

STRAIGHT THROUGH
Moving slowly, the royal car skipped the circle and made its way straight past on Douglas. Cameras clicked and children waved flags and shouted hurrah, and the big collective smile of their elders showed their warmth of feeling.

For an hour's wait the royal passage was but a fleeting gesture, but the Roundabout crowd seemed well pleased.

'CHAMPION'
"Champion!" said one man as the crowd dispersed; that seemed to sum up the general reaction.

Near the city hall, E. E. Smith, just one of the crowd which reached as far as anyone could see, wore his medals.

He had served under five monarchs.

BACK TO ROYAL NAVY
"And I'd serve again," he said. Mr. Smith is 80. His military career goes back to the time he was a messenger boy in the Royal Navy when Victoria was Queen.

A little away from him, W. A. Scott had brought a three-foot step ladder, the better to see the Queen.

Mr. Scott is not a royalist. But he's British.

'IT'S AN ODD THING'
A tall American, with a small Chinese girl on his shoulder, said: "Gosh, it's an odd thing. You feel something about these people. You'd call me a Yankee but right now I'm for the Queen. God bless her." Elihu Robb is a visitor from Santa Anita.

Half a dozen times the crowd surged forward off the sidewalks and into the street, but they were false alarms. Police Chief John Blackstock and constables, and some naval personnel, gently but firmly pushed the people back.

COULDN'T BE HELD
But when the royal car, with its standard, came abreast, nothing could have held the excited well-wishers back. "God bless the Queen," shouted Mr. Smith.

People near him cheered. Twenty minutes before the royal procession arrived, spectators on Douglas Street started crowding onto the pavement.

City police tried to keep them back, but the crowd, more than 10 deep between the City Hall and Yates held its ground.

It was the same on Yates Street, and in this section alone it was estimated that more than 15,000 people saw the Queen.

DEEP BLACK
In the crowd were a number of Doukhobor women dressed in deep black. One old lady with a camera got right into the front row.

GATHER IN KNOTS

The trip down the Island south from Duncan was uneventful, with many stretches of the Malahat bare of people. Spectators tended to congregate, particularly where parking bays are provided along the highway at view points.

Several tourist cars managed to worm their way into the tail end of the royal cavalcade, with passengers waving graciously to people along the road, but the cars were cut out by official vehicles.

STOP FOR VIEW

The procession stopped for a few minutes at the summit of the Malahat to allow the Queen and Prince Philip to admire the view.

The first concentration of spectators was at the entrance to Goldstream Park, and from then on into the city there were always people along the side of the road. Heaviest concentration was about the Langford underpass, where several thousand people lined the route for more than a mile.

Can a Man Park at a Meter?

LONDON (AP) — British traffic authorities were trying Thursday to decide if a man can legally park himself at a parking meter for automobiles.

The son of the late H. G. Wells is one of the principals involved in this neat little issue of English ethics. What happened was this:

Professor George Philip Wells, who was 58 yesterday, is professor of zoology at London University. Driving to the Saville Club for lunch, the professor sighted a parking space. Just as he was about to back his car into it, he saw a man standing in the street in front of a ticking meter.

"Excuse me," Wells called out from the driver's seat, "but I'd like to park where you're standing."

"Sorry," said the man, "but I'm parked here."

"You can't park there," replied the professor with considerable logic, "you're a man, not an automobile."

"I'm well aware of that," rejoined the man, "but I'm parked here until my brother arrives in his car."

"Nonsense," muttered the professor to himself as he slowly but firmly backed his vehicle into the space.

"Sir," said the man, "that's unethical."

Unethical or ethical, the professor parked.

Who was right?

"The man was right," said the Automobile Association.

"The man was wrong," said the Westminster City Council.

"We don't honestly know," said the ministry of transport. And there hangs the issue.

Over Appointment

Labor Men Patch Rift With Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's two central labor bodies and the federal government have patched up their big rift over a controversial appointment to the unemployment insurance commission.

The Canadian Labor Congress and the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Labor withdrew representatives from the unemployment insurance advisory committee in April over appointment of Alastair MacArthur of Toronto to the three-man commission.

The CLC has told the government it wants representation on the committee and has nominated two men.

The CCCL has nominated President Roger Mathieu of Montreal.

Informants said Labor Minister Starr has recommended that all three nominees be accepted.

MPs Urge Shake-Up To Boost CBC Morale

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Commons Broadcasting Committee called yesterday for an administrative shake-up to end confusion and restore morale at the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The committee said the "weak" administrative structure was a major factor in the troubles which have plagued the publicly-owned corporation in recent months.

It recommended the CBC board of directors give immediate consideration to a thorough reorganization of the administration.

The committee also said a limit should be placed on the amount of public funds the corporation receives each year to defray operating losses. This amount totalled $54,120,000 in the year ended March 31.

It recommended the CBC board of directors give immediate consideration to a thorough reorganization of the administration.

Fur Collars, Bright Satins New Fall Fashion—for Men

By MARY PRIME
NEW YORK (UPI) — Men's fashions for fall and winter turn a gentleman into a bit of a dandy. And it's the woman's fault as usual.

Styles shown yesterday for 230 visiting fashion reporters included coat and jacket linings in fake fur pile, quilted satin, wool and striped satin. Most linings were in bright colors and vivid patterns. The new clothes included "Rex Harrison" hats and sweaters, fake fur collars, Dolman sleeves, plaid trousers and car coats.

For the first time, men's evening clothes will be tropical weight for winter—an idea stolen from the ladies.

"We have discovered that warmth is not a consideration in evening wear," said the show's commentator. "After all, the ladies are covered up on top only enough to get by the law."

To show that men's wear designers have the woman shopper in mind, the styles included a grey tweed jacket with a red lining and red facing on the reverse side of the collar, meant to be worn turned up. Red was chosen, said the commentator, because "women love to buy red for men."

Three major silhouettes were shown—the ivy, continental, and American neutral. Although most men wear and continue to wear the American neutral, the ivy style is strong. And in one year, the continental look has almost equalled the ivy in acceptance, a show spokesman said.

CAR SALES HIGHER
Ford Motor Company of Canada reports that its June sales of domestic-built cars were up 46 per cent from a year ago, and that its sales of English Fords for the month were up 80 per cent from June, 1958. Combined sales were up 50 per cent for June and 18 per cent for the first six months of the year.

Nearly-Completed School Gutted by Fire at Saseenos

Fire caused an estimated $20,000 damage to the new elementary school at Saseenos yesterday morning, just as painters were about to start work on the not-yet-completed structure.

Caused by sparks from a plumber's torch, the flames swept quickly through the one-storey, three-room building, but Saseenos volunteer firemen had the blaze under control in three-quarters of an hour.

The school, slated for occupancy in the fall, was being built at a cost of $38,540. Roof and walls were left standing, but little more.

Reconstruction of the building, fully covered by insurance, is expected to start as soon as possible. Pupils who would have used the school will be accommodated at Saseenos elementary school.

Boost for Art, Music Proposed in Grants

Art and music will get a bigger boost from the city's annual approximate $25,000 in charitable grants, if recommendations brought down by the finance committee of council yesterday are followed.

The committee report recommended $3,500 for the Victoria Symphony Society and $2,500

for the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

Both grants are an increase of $1,000 more than last year.

Included in the list of proposed grants are $2,884.20 for Greater Victoria Celebrations Association, $2,446 to the YWCA, $4,416 to the YMOA, $4,025 to the Aged Women's Home, $500 to Queen Alexan-

Fire Quelled

Crews Save Garage

Fire which flared up just after 1:30 p.m. yesterday at the Gorge Vale B-A service station, Craigflower and Tillicum, brought both Esquimalt and HMC Dockyard pumps to the scene.

Firefighters had the blaze under control before it spread from rear storage rooms to the main garage.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Exact cause and extent of damage had not been determined yesterday.

Station lessee I. G. Wright, 552 Tait, in the station only a couple of weeks, and mechanic Fred Graves, were in the front office when they noticed smoke in the garage.

They found the smoke coming from the door to the back rooms, but were prevented by the heat from investigating further. They turned in an alarm, then moved two cars out to the parking lot.

One of the cars, its front wheels off, had to be pushed out on a mobile jack.

Part of Saanich Faces Voluntary Water Curb

Saanich reeve George Chatterton last night issued a plea for voluntary sprinkling restrictions in his municipality.

He said the Persimmon Drive, and Ascot Road areas are completely without water from 6 to 9 each night. The situation in these areas will be remedied next year.

"But," he said, "since the present shortage in these areas creates real hardship, particularly to families with children, I appeal to the people of Saanich to impose voluntary restrictions on sprinkling between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. while the warm weather lasts."

'Keenly Interested, Very Pleased'

Units of Three Services Put on Polished Display

Close to 1,000 men of Canada's three armed services put on a polished display for the Queen here yesterday.

Defence Minister George Pearkes told The Colonist after parade that Her Majesty was "keenly interested—and very pleased."

At one time, the Queen was so engrossed in conversation with Mr. Pearkes that she failed to spot approach of the army contingent until the officers, with swords stiffly at the salute, were opposite the reviewing stand on Belleville.

LITTLE SMILE

The Queen straightened quickly and took a half-pace forward with a little self-conscious smile.

Mr. Pearkes said the Queen showed a keen interest in the units of all three services and asked where each trained and the history of the unit.

Thousands of spectators cheered as the royal couple moved down a central walk to the Belleville Street reviewing stand. A group of youngsters who had clambered into the branches of a tree near the statue of Queen Victoria, great-grandmother to the present Queen, were rewarded with a wave and a smile from the royal couple.

He said afterward that the Prince was interested in the navy's officer-training plan and "seemed easy to talk to."

In the march-past were color parties of the navy, army and air force; bands of each of the services; 360 officers and men from ships and shore establishments of Pacific Command; 180 officers and men of the army, and 180 officers and men of the RCMP.

SCMP MOVE IN

Crowds gathered around the royal car as it left the reviewing stand and scarlet-coated RCMP moved in to hold spectators in check.

The Queen, gingerly avoiding the sun-heated top of her open car as she stood to wave, retired to Government House, where she and Prince Philip attended a dinner dance.

No 'Hot Cargo' Court Orders

An injunction directing the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and its Alberni Local 185 to revoke "hot cargo" orders against logs of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. was granted in British Columbia Supreme Court in Vancouver.

The injunction, granted by Mr. Justice Norman Whittaker, also required the striking union to refrain from picketing or trespassing on 17 MacMillan and Bloedel log storage areas in the Alberni Canal district.

It also restrains the union from interfering with operations of the lumber company's log-towing contractors, Stone Brothers Ltd., and from inducing pulp, paper and electrical workers to refrain from work in MacMillan and Bloedel's Alberni plant.

Mr. Justice Whittaker directed the union to post notices and to notify the pulp and paper unions that IWA "hot cargo" instructions had been cancelled.

ALBERNI — The local branch of the Bank of Montreal, on the city's main street was entered overnight after a rock was tossed through the front door.

Alberni detachment RCMP, working short-handed while three of the five members were recruited for guard duties during the royal visit to Vancouver Island, is investigating an incident which had no apparent rhyme or reason.

They are looking for a man who threw a rock through the glass, carefully picked out the broken pieces of pane, entered and removed the rock, leaving it on the steps of the bank. Innumerable fingerprints were left on the glass shards which were piled beside the building. Lights were turned on in the bank but no attempt seemed to have been made to open the vault.

The break-in was discovered by Mrs. Clara Moore, the bank janitor, who came to clean the building shortly after 7 a.m.

Margaret's Escort Dances with Queen

The Queen last night danced with John Turner, young Vancouver lawyer who squired Princess Margaret at two balls in Canada last year.

Mr. Turner, stepson of Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross, was one of 100 guests at a private dinner given by Mr. Ross for the Queen.

The Queen wore an evening dress of jade green and turquoise blue flowered tulle with full gathered back, a three-strand diamond necklace, diamond cluster earrings and a diamond bracelet.

After a dinner of smoked salmon and beef steak, a group of square dancers performed for the Queen. The group was accompanied by a Victoria band, the Hometowners.

The square dancers were followed by a swing band and the Queen had three dances—with Prince Philip, Mr. Turner and Mr. Ross. One of the tunes was Blueberry Hill.

He said in the last three months the index has risen only four per cent.

Greeting by Crowds Warm, Affectionate

By IAN STREET

Queen Elizabeth made her first speech in British Columbia from the steps of the legislative buildings here yesterday.

It was the highlight of a ceremony welcoming the royal couple to B.C., and the climax of a busy day in which she and Prince Philip visited an Indian village at Nanaimo, visited Chemainus and Duncan and then drove down to Victoria.

Everywhere they went on Vancouver Island, the royal couple was greeted with warmth and affection.

CROWDS ORDERLY

Quiet, orderly crowds lined the routes of the royal procession and looked on with deep interest at the ceremonies where stops were scheduled.

A crowd of almost 10,000 massed in front of the legislative buildings heard the Queen say she was impressed with the developments that have taken place in B.C. since she was here in 1951.

"I am very glad to be here once again this afternoon," she said in reply to an address of welcome given by Premier W. A. C. Bennett, "and thank you most sincerely for your kind welcome."

BEAMING PREMIER

The beaming premier, hatless, wearing a morning suit, said in his brief speech: "We are grateful you have had the opportunity during your visit to B.C. to enjoy a brief rest."

"And now that your visit is drawing all too soon to a close we earnestly hope that it will not be long before your loyal subjects may welcome you once again to this province."

"May God protect you always, Your Majesty and Your Royal Highness."

TEN MINUTES LATE

A flutter of excitement passed through the crowd of shirt-sleeved men and women in gay summer dresses as the appointed time for the Queen's arrival came and went.

Finally at 5.30, 10 minutes behind schedule, the first shot of a 21-gun royal salute fired by the 5th Independent Medium Battery, RCA, boomed out across the Inner Harbor.

ANIMATED CHATTER

Brief ceremonies marking the official welcome were held on the steps of the legislative building.

The Queen chatted animatedly with the premier before stepping onto a dais to take the royal salute from an RCN royal guard and color party which had stood motionless for 30 minutes in temperatures topping 80-degrees.

The Queen smiled often as she walked quickly along the ranks of the naval guard accompanied by the guard commander, Lt.-Cmdr. H. E. T. Lawrence. She carried a parasol, but didn't bother to open it.

SHOWS FATIGUE

Mounting the steps to where members of the B.C. cabinet and other ranking officials waited, the Queen seemed suddenly to show the fatigue of a gruelling series of events which started with her arrival in Nanaimo at 10 a.m.

The Queen in her speech recalled the visit here last year of her sister, Princess Margaret.

She said that the visit in the last several days in "this rich and varied province" has shown that "yours is a favored region, amply blessed under the providence of God."

'AS YOUR QUEEN'

"As your Queen I have been impressed by the development which have taken place since I was here last. I recall the foresight, the courage and the hard work of those who pioneered this vast land and I see that its people still possess the same qualities."

"I am confident, therefore, that this province faces a great and prosperous future, worthy of those who built it, and I pray that this may be so."

Picture Highlights Of Tour Inside

Vancouver Island has been quivering with excitement, mounting by the minute, ever since the Queen of Canada and her husband stepped ashore at Nanaimo yesterday.

And for every minute there has been a thrilling highlight—many of which have been caught by Colonist photographers—see pages 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 17, 18, 19.
